WATCH IT BUSTER WITH THE CLUSTER

Criticizing Victoria's cluster lights is akin to attacking motherhood, apple pie and the flag.

But city engineer John Sansom goes further than mere criticism of the lights' feeble illuminating qualities.

He's suggesting they be switched off, except during the tourist season and at Christmas.

Sansom's recommendation, which seems likely to cause some high-voltage static — particularly from the business community — will be discussed by city council's public works committee on Thursday.

He says in his report that a reduction in the use of cluster lights is justified because they are "for ornamental use only and contribute very little to the lighting function."

"They do, however, contribute to the image of the city and their use could be confined to the tourist and Christmas seasons," he concedes.

He estimates that the capital cost of providing separate circuits would be about $60,000, but the city would save about $11,000 a year in energy costs at current rates.

The city's street lighting budget this year is around $220,000. In its closed budget sessions earlier this year, council expressed alarm at B.C. Hydro's prediction of a 16 per cent increase annually, and asked Sansom to investigate possible savings.

But the city's engineer's report says that, apart from the cluster lights, there's nothing to be gained by cutting back on the street lighting program. Quite the contrary, that would lead to more traffic accidents and hinder crime prevention.

Sansom concludes that the only significant cost saving would come through converting the street lighting system from mercury vapor to the sodium vapor type, which are twice as efficient.

The capital cost involved would be about $500,000 but the city would save about $80,000 a year on its electricity bill, he says.

Common Place . . . Too Mundane

Kasapi Construction Co. doesn't like common place names and neither does Saanich council.

In a letter tabled at a meeting of the lands, planning and housing committee Tuesday night, the company asked that Common Place, a new street off Dawnview Crescent in Gordon Head, be renamed.

The company wanted something "a little more distinguished," a spokesman said . . . something "a little less mundane."

The company suggested Galaxyview Place.

Committee members agreed Common Place was, well, commonplace, and voted unanimously to make the change.

But on a recommendation from municipal planner Gil Laurenson the committee approved a shortened version.

Henceforth Common Place will be known as Galaxy Place.

As one spectator quipped, Far Out.

BOYLE PLANNING TO QUIT

CRTC Report Raps 'Subversive' CBC

OTTAWA (CP) — The electronic news media, not just the CBC, is "biased to the point of "subversiveness," and all the country's news media are aggravating the cultural apartheid dividing English and French Canada, says the Canadian Radio-Television and Telecommunications Commission (CRTC).

In a special report the commission also says the CBC has lost true accountability to Parliament and the public. A comprehensive inquiry should be held into the administration of broadcasting and cultural affairs.

But the report, tabled in the Commons today by Prime Minister Trudeau, says it would be disruptive and counter-productive to hold a full-fledged royal commission into broadcasting at this time.

Tabling of the report, written by a special CRTC committee and endorsed by the full commission, has revived persistent rumors that CRTC chairman Harry Boyle plans to quit soon.

CRTC sources also said Tuesday that Boyle, who has been with the CRTC in various capacities since it started in 1968, plans to resign. They said Boyle will not announce his future plans until later because he said he does not want to upstage the CRTC report.

Boyle has left the door open, saying he will announce his future plans before the end of the month.

Boyle and the committee concluded that the CBC, along with other media outlets, is biased in its presentation of news and public affairs because of failure to provide adequate information among regions of the country and among various groups, particularly between French and English-speaking Canadians.

This type of bias "is a form of journalistic malpractice that must be corrected by the CBC if it is to enjoy the confidence of the public and parliament," Boyle wrote in his letter.

The report said that based on a broad definition of bias, the committee has found damning statistics indicating "the electronic news media in Canada, English as well as French, are biased to the point of subversiveness.

"They are biased because, so far as they are able, they prevent Canadians from getting enough balanced information about Canada to make informed decisions regarding the country's future."

The report said the media are also biased because they work from intolerable, "extremely stupid" assumptions that French and English Canadians couldn't care less about what is happening to other groups and that Canadians aren't interested in news outside the Hamilton-to-Quebec City corridor.

ICBC Claim Filed After Car Sold

The Insurance Corp. of B.C. paid out a claim to Surrey Dodge Ltd., the former company of Socred George Kerster, on a car which had been sold before the claim was even made, the opposition revealed Tuesday.

Dennis Cocke (NDP—New Westminster) tabled a document in the legislature Tuesday which revealed that the controversial claim was registered with ICBC by Surrey Dodge on March 25, 1976, but that the car the claim was made on had been sold two weeks earlier.

Education Minister Pat McGeer, in charge of ICBC, said he would attempt to solve the puzzle later.

The tabling of the document was the latest step in a week-long attempt by the opposition to prove that Kerster interfered in payment of the claim to Surrey Dodge, which he headed until shortly after his election to the legislature in December, 1975.

The letter tabled by Cocke was sent April 14, 1976, to Surrey Dodge from Derek Vettese, claims supervisor of the Surrey claims centre.

In the letter, Vettese goes over some of the history of the case, saying that although a 1969 Mustang was stolen from the Surrey Dodge lot June 25, 1975, the claim was not made with ICBC until nine months later on March 25, 1976.

"Repairs to this Mustang appear to have been commenced in mid-November, with the vehicle being subsequently sold on the 11th day of March, 1976," the Vettese letter says.

Earlier documents tabled in the legislature revealed that:

—The claims committee of ICBC, the ultimate decision-making body on whether to pay out disputed claims, went against the recommendation of ICBC adjusters in paying out the Surrey Dodge claim;

—Kerster phoned Vettese in June, 1976, about the Surrey Dodge claim and that he also discussed it during a visit to ICBC general manager Norman Bortnick's office in

LIQUOR SALES HIT $448.3M

Liquor sales increased almost $60 million to $448.3 million in B.C. during the fiscal year ended March 31, 1976.

The government has since declared an intention to promote moderation in consumption of alcoholic beverages.

The B.C. Liquor Administration Branch annual report, tabled in the legislature Tuesday, showed that income transferred by the branch to the government was $149.7 million, up from $120.3 million the previous year.

Sale of Canadian liquor continued to be the major revenue source, rising to $185.8 million from $162 million. B.C. wines generated sales totalling $38.1 million, compared with $32.2 million the year before. Imported wines brought $28.3 million in sales, up from $19 million.

Health Minister Bob McClelland said last week the government intends to use profits from the sale of alcohol to conduct a major advertising campaign aimed at making liquor ads less glamorous.

Tougher UIC Passes 134-17

OTTAWA (CP) — Legislation the Liberals promised in the 1974 general election to cut cheaters and loafers off unemployment insurance benefits finally was passed Tuesday by the Commons.

The bill, increasing the time a person must work to be eligible for benefits and reducing the amount of time a person can get benefits, passed 134 to 17.

The Liberals had the support of 35 Progressive Conservative MPs. Ten New Democrats, five Social Credit MPs, independent Leonard Jones (Moncton) and Robert Muir (PC)—Cape Breton-The Sydneys) voted against it.

Earlier, the government with Conservative help beat back 130 to 16 an NDP motion to delay the final vote for six months, a move which would have effectively killed the legislation.

Manpower Minister Bud Cullen has said at least 50,000 people could be removed from the unemployment insurance rolls by the legislation.

Conservative opposition to the legislation dwindled after Cullen altered the original bill's provision requiring 12 weeks work for benefit eligibility. Eight weeks work now is required to get benefits.

He replaced the controversial provision with a requirement of 10 weeks to 14 weeks of work, depending on unemployment in a region, to be eligible for benefits.

The bill also sets a range of 10 weeks to 50 weeks of benefits based on a formula which includes regional unemployment and the number of weeks worked.

McKELVEY RESIGNS $1,625 JOB

Michael McKelvey has quit his $1,625-a-month job as executive assistant to Transport and Communications Minister Jack Davis, his father-in-law.

Premier Bill Bennett Monday told all ministers to get their close relatives off the public payroll.

Davis said Tuesday McKelvey sent him a letter of resignation last week — effective Monday — but will continue to work out of the minister's office in an unpaid capacity until he has completed a couple of projects.

Security Council Okays Vietnam

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — The Security Council today unanimously recommended Vietnam for United Nations membership.

The council's action, made possible when the United States ended its opposition to Vietnamese membership, was a prerequisite for final approval of Vietnamese membership at the next session of the General Assembly Sept. 20.

Vietnam and the already recommended African state of Djibouti will be the 148th and 149th UN members.

Flood Wreaks Havoc On Johnstown Again

Times News Services

JOHNSTOWN, Pha. — Ten feet of water today engulfed this city which has become synonymous with U.S. flood disasters, chasing thousands from their homes and spreading death and widespread destruction through surrounding valleys.

By mid-day, five deaths had been reported and rescuers were snatching the stranded from trees and rooftops.

Many more were reported missing in the seven counties surrounding Johnstown which was devastated by floodwaters in 1889 with a death toll of 2,200.

Rivers and creeks gorged by a sudden overnight deluge of up to 10 inches of rain swept cars, houses and businesses along in the gush of water that reached 10 feet in some areas.

The city was isolated except to the helicopters that were rushed to aid the rescue effort.

Scattered looting was reported and a "shoot to kill" order was issued to the police. National Guardsmen were called to aid the rescue effort.

Mayor Herb Pfuhl estimated damage in Johnstown alone would exceed $100 million.

A huge Bethlehem Steel plant stretching seven miles along the Conemaugh River was extensively damaged.

Whole communities, including 15,000 residents in nearby Windber, were isolated as the flash flood blocked highways and knocked out communications.

"People are on the rooftops and in trees. They're everywhere as we understand it," said Elmer Shank, deputy Cambria County civil defence director.

"Our main problem now is getting them out."

Two National Guard battalions were called out to help evacuate people, stranded in their homes.

Robert John, a reporter for the Johnstown Tribune-Democrat, said thousands fled to high ground overlooking the city of 42,000, situated in a valley in the Allegheny Mountains where the Conemaugh and the Stonycreek Rivers converge about 55 miles east of Pittsburgh.

The heavy rain fell for four or five hours Tuesday night during a series of storms that struck without warning. Minor flooding was first reported. Then the streams began overflowing in torrents, sweeping aside homes like matchsticks.

"Nobody was prepared for it," John said. "The weather forecast had no way indicated the storm of this extent. With these hills the more it rained the more it became frightening.

"Cars were washed down streams and people began leaving their homes early this morning as the flood waters began to rise."

Russian Bought Secrets

OTTAWA (CP) — Police disclosed today that a Soviet military official who left Canada this month was the object of a 16-month investigation during which he purchased documents from a research scientist.

An RCMP spokesman said that Lt.-Cmdr. Valerie Smirov, an assistant military attache, paid expense money and a small gratuity to a research scientist.

The documents were of non-classified and industrial technology.

Other sources said that the scientist in question worked at the Bell Northern Research facility here and that while the material concerned is not now classified it could have been in the future as research progressed.

Police Sift Killing Clues

CHILLIWACK (CP) — RCMP officials now believe all evidence at the scene of Monday night's shooting incident near here has been found and hope to wrap up scientific examination and searches of the area later today.

At least two and possibly four area teenagers were gunned down by a long-haired stranger Monday night and police are continuing their search for two of the missing youths and for the suspect.

Sergeant Dave McLay of Agassiz RCMP detachment said police have asked the public to report to the nearest police detachment any information they may have concerning a possible suspect in the slayings or on the whereabouts of the two still missing.

Meanwhile, police divers were continuing their search of the Fraser River after finding the bodies of Evert Den Hertog, 19, of Rosedale and Bert Menger, 19, of Clearbrook on Tuesday.

Still missing were Den Hertog's brother John, 16, and Leola Corrine Culiker, 15, also of Rosedale.

The bodies were recovered from the river at points near the riverside park, 10 miles east of this Fraser Valley community, where the shootings took place.

Menger's brother, Ed, 15, was the only survivor, and the only known witness to the shooting.

"We really don't know what we have here," an RCMP spokesman said. "We don't know if we have a maniac on the loose or what—we don't know."

Autopsies had not been performed Tuesday night, but coroner Dr. A. D. Colledge said Evert Den Hertog had been shot in the right shoulder with the bullet crossing his chest and also had been stabbed six times in the chest.

Suicide Stemmed from Jealousy—Police

Emotional strain caused by jealousy in a lovers' triangle was responsible for the suicide of 32-year-old Wayne Gundrum on June 2, Saanich police said Tuesday.

Insp. Robin Stewart said the department has closed its books on the incident after receiving an inquiry report from coroner Edmond Jorre de St. Jorre which put the cause of death as suicide.

Injured in the incident were 29-year-old Kenneth Paul Wilke who lived with Gundrum at 1521 Cedar Glen, and 31-year-old Robin Lee Clarke who lived at 4031 Hollydene where the shootings took place.

Clarke, a former girlfriend of Gundrum's, and Wilke were in the bedroom of her home when Gundrum burst in and began shooting a rifle.

Wilke was wounded in the arm and received cuts when he escaped through a bedroom window.

The woman received a bullet wound in the back and a broken right arm from a rifle butt swing by Gundrum.

She escaped and drove herself to hospital. Wilke ran to a neighbor's house and called police.

Saanich police and the Greater Victoria Emergency Response team surrounded the house for 3½ hours before bursting in and discovering Gundrum's body in the bathroom.

Stewart said the shootings were the result of "emotional strain . . . brought about by the recent separation from Robin Clarke."

Anglers Douse Blaze

A group of anglers armed with a three-gallon bucket and a minnow pial helped put out a bush fire on a four-acre island in Saanich Inlet Tuesday afternoon.

The fire broke out at about 3 p.m. on the northern end of unoccupied Senasus Island and was spotted by Ron Stanley-Jones and his wife who were fishing near their home at Henderson Point opposite the island.

The couple, taking a bucket and minnow pail rowed ashore, and were joined by other fishermen. Ten Central Saanich volunteer firemen arrived a short time later in a boat provided by Anglers Anchorage Marina, and quickly contained the blaze.

A spokesman for the fire department, who said about an acre was burned, praised the anglers.

"If they hadn't been there the whole island may have gone up," he said.

Mass Murders Claimed 30

VANCOUVER (CP) — More than 30 persons have fallen victim to mass murders in a half-dozen incidents in British Columbia during the past 19 years.

The most recent was Monday, when four teen-agers were gunned down by a rifle-wielding man. A fifth youth fled the scene when the man began firing a .30-06-calibre rifle and escaped, uninjured, to report the carnage.

Most of the known multiple murderers in recent B.C. history have been men, and most have been insane — although their reasons for killing have varied.

Using a borrowed revolver, Vancouver policeman Leonard Hogue stalked and gunned down his wife and children in their Coquitlam home in April, 1965, before turning the weapon on himself. Hogue wiped out his family after learning he was being investigated in connection with two holdups.

Dale Nelson of West Creston, shot, stabbed and mutilated three adults and five children early one Saturday in the fall of 1970 in the West Kootenay community of West Creston. Nelson surrendered to police the following day.

Nelson was found fit to stand trial, but was found not guilty by reason of insanity by a British Columbia Supreme Court jury, and was committed to a mental institution.

Of the various multiple slayings, the one that most resembles Monday's tragedy occurred in a bush area seven miles north of Mission on July 12, 1964.

The bodies of Donald Kehler, 19, Rodney Wiren, 19, and Tony Webster, 18, all of Surrey, were found slaughtered in their sleeping bags beside Steelhead Lake. They had been shot 17 times with a .22-calibre rifle they had been shooting with earlier.

Dalton Grey, then 24, was convicted of Kehler's murder and was sentenced to life in prison.

In June, 1958, David Paul, 53, his wife Helen, and daughter Dorothy were shot and hacked to death with an axe in what was billed as Vancouver's first triple murder. The killer has never been found.

William Lepine, 27, an escaper from Riverview Mental Hospital, went on a rampage in the Kootenays in August, 1972, killing six persons ranging from a 16-year-old boy to a 71-year-old man and wounding three other persons.

Lepine was found unfit to stand trial.

Anne Durrant, 22, of Vancouver and Leif Carlsson of Sweden were found shot to death in their sleeping bags at Radar Beach on the west coast of Vancouver Island in June, 1972. They had been shot 10 times with a .22-calibre rifle.

Police issued wanted posters for Joseph Burgess, alias Job Week, a Bible-quoting former Jesus freak, but the suspect has not been located.

THE OUTCASTS

by Ben Wicks

Another Pipeline Problem

DEADHORSE, Alaska (AP) — Oil is moving again in the trouble-plagued Alaska pipeline after the third shutdown in 16 days As in the other stoppages, officials blamed "human error."

Repair crews drove a wooden wedge into a 1½-inch vent fitting on a valve Tuesday evening to plug a leak caused when a truck rammed into a section of the 800-mile line. The U.S. interior department said that more than 200 barrels—8,400 gallons—sprayed from the line and clean-up crews were collecting as much of the spilled fuel as possible.

Alyeska Pipeline Service Co. refused to allow reporters to visit the scene 23 miles south of Prudhoe Bay. But from a plane flying over the site, it looked like a black-and-brown fan had spread over about seven acres of tundra. Some oil had reached two nearby lakes, but it was not possible from the air to judge how serious the pollution was.

Oil in the pipeline started moving again at 2:11 a.m. EDT, three hours after the repairs were made. An interior department spokesman said the agency did not require any special approval before flow was resumed.

Less than 24 hours earlier, the interior department had given Alyeska permission to resume pumping oil through the $7.7-billion pipeline following a 10-day shutdown. That had been caused by an explosion which destroyed Pump Station No. 8, and the interior department blamed "human error."

The leak was reported at 5:55 p.m. EDT. The truck, a front loader, was helping to bury the valve, which like others along the line was uncovered for the June start-up to make it more accessible.

Edward Patton, Alyeska chief executive officer, said the truck knocked off a small vent on a valve. An interior department spokesman said the line was shut down immediately, but oil already in the pipe sprayed out until the pressure was relieved.

An Alyeska spokesman said the 48-inch line was not damaged and the damaged valve fitting was replaced five hours after the leak was reported.

Early Tuesday, several hours after the oil flow had resumed, an oil-well pumping station at Prudhoe Bay, one of four that feed the pipeline was closed because of a leak of 40 to 50 barrels, about 2,100 gallons.

TRIDENT ARRESTS

BANGOR, Wash. (AP)—Two men were arrested Tuesday outside the main gate of the Trident nuclear submarine base under construction near here, said Kitsap County prosecutor Dan Clem.

John Springer of Baltimore and Michael Caprio of New Jersey were later charged with disorderly conduct, specifically "obstructing vehicular traffic," Clem said.

Jim Douglass, a member of the Bangor summer task force demonstrating at the base, said the two men were handing out leaflets inviting Trident base workers to a meeting with the anti-missile group.

Thirty-two other persons — a number of them Canadians — have been arrested for trespassing and traffic obstruction since an anti-nuclear demonstration at the base.

City French Immersion Program Depends on Gov't Funding Size

The amount of government money available likely will decide whether Greater Victoria school board accepts an education ministry "invitation" to establish a French immersion program in high schools.

Vic Thomson, assistant superintendent of schools in charge of curriculum, said today he doesn't know too much about the proposal but he doubts the board will consider it until concrete information on funding is supplied.

Education Minister Pat McGeer said Tuesday he hoped that by as early as 1978, larger school disitricts in B.C. would have established immersion programs for students wishing to become bilingual.

"The realities of Canadian life indicate that innreased opportunities for British Columbia students to become bilingual must be made available."

He did not indicate what type of funding would be made available.

With federal government assistance, Greater Victoria has emphasized immersion at the elementary level.

An immersion program for kindergarten students began five years ago, and has now expanded to Grade 4 with an immediate goal to expand to Grade 7.

Last winter, language commissioner Keith Spicer said Victoria has the best participation of all Canadian cities on a per capita basis in implementing French immersion.

McGeer noted the study of French seems to be increasing in B.C. with 20.1 per cent of elementary students voluntarily learning the language last school year, comapred with 5.7 per cent in 1970-71.

This summer at the Lester Pearson College of the Pacific, there are 55 elementary teachers taking a four-week course to improve their French teaching skills.

And a survey of 16 language schools and universities across the country as well as federal government statistics show record numbers of Canadians are trying to become bilingual.

The survey found record numbers of francophones in Quebec are studying English, and English-speaking Canadians in every province are studying French with similar enthtusiasm.

Floyd Tuzo, co-ordinator of English second-language programs at Concordia University in Montreal, said the number of francophones enrolled in English courses has more than tripled in the last two years.

"The majority of these students are young people who voted for the Parti Quebecois and they're not in the least defensive about learning English for employment purposes," Tuzo said.

Figures from the secretary of state's office show 7,000 full-time students received $800 bursaries to take intensive six-week English and French-language courses this summer in 37 institutions. The budget for the program has been increased 50 per cent.

"The so-called backlash is over-rated," Mary Gray, the bursary co-ordinator, says. "We've found a really genuine interest in learing French and no evidence of a decline of interest among francophones studying English."

TOMMY TAKES OFF ON HOUSE SAFARI

OTTAWA (FP) — Tommy Douglas, the usually staid former leader of the NDP, touched off wild appluase in the Commons Tuesday by turning up in a short-sleeved bush jacket.

Douglas was merely trying to beat Ottawa's 33-degree heat, but when he rose to ask a question the Liberals noticed he was dressed much like Prime Minister Trudeau.

Trudeau was wearing an olive green leisure suit that looked like it came straight from the African veldt.

When the Liberals spotted Douglas's garb they cheered, heckled and thumped their desks for at least 30 seconds.

Douglas, however, remained cooler than his tormentors and got the best of an exchange with Mr. Trudeau.

"Step forward so we can see your shorts," said Trudeau, although Douglas was wearing long trousers.

Douglas then told the PM that "jealousy will get him nowhere."

ICBC Claim Filed

August, 1976, while there on another matter.

The purpose of the Vettese letter tabled by Cocke was to advise Surrey Dodge that there were definite problems with the claim.

"The corporation has had no opportunity to inspect the damages sustained to this unit when it was stolen from your lot and as the vehicle is no longer in your possession, the problem is further complicated," Vettese says in the letter.

Cocke demanded in the legislature Tuesday whether it is ICBC policy to pay out claims on a car that was never seen by adjusters or anyone else in the corporation.

Earlier documents had shown that the Mustang was recovered damaged, about four days after it was stolen in June, 1975.

ICBC paid out a damage claim of $1,850 for the car, which, another ICBC document revealed, was about $400 more than the actual value of the car.

McGeer took the questions in the legislature as notice, which means he may answer them later.

Outside the house, former Attorney-general Alex Macdonald (NDP—Vancouver East) said that "you can't damage your car, and then just before you put in a claim — eight months later — pay the premium in preparation for that claim."

Macdonald also rejected an accusation by McGeer that ICBC documents tabled in the house had been stolen.

"The documents were not stolen, but they were received by members of the opposition," he said.

Macdonald said it is the "privilege and the duty" of the members to use any documents "when they come to light" to prevent cover-ups by the government.

Eighteen Blacks Burned to Death

SALISBURY (Reuter) — Eighteen blacks, including women and children, were burned to death when guerrillas set fire to a hut in Rhodesia's northeastern area today, the South African Press Association reported.

The news agency quoted reports reaching Salisbury as saying most of the dead were women and children. It said no further details were immediately available.

Prime Minister Ian Smith, meanwhile, appeared unshaken today by vehement opposition from black nationalists to his plan for an election leading to a multi-racial government for Rhodesia.

Government sources said the white-minority leader is convinced that his plan can succeed, although he has not entirely closed the door on an Anglo-American proposal for a peaceful transition to majority rule by next year.

Black nationalist leaders Bishop Abel Muzorewa and Rev. Ndabaningi Sithole scored Smith's appeal for an election mandate to seek a settlement with Rhodesia-based nationalists.

WAR PLAN—ARAFAT

BEIRUT (AP) — Yasser Arafat's Palestine Liberation Organization declared today that Israeli Prime Minister Menahem Begin's latest peace proposals will set the stage for a fifth Arab-Israeli war.

"This is a war plan, not a peace plan," said PLO spokesman Mahmoud Labadi. "The PLS rejects the Begin plan from A to Z, because it negates the right of the Palestinian people to self-determination and nationhood."

the weather

The summery trend in the weather which started in southern B.C. Tuesday will spread northwards today as a narrow ridge of high pressure continues to build across the province. This ridge is an appendage of a high cell of high pressure centred in the mid-Pacific. The dry stable air under the ridge will result in generally sunny weather today with temperatures climbing back to near normal after our record-breaking cold spell. The upper level circulation will remain virtually unchanged through the remainder of this week and with July rapidly coming to a close we don't seem to be any closer to the establishment of a real summertime situation.

He Wants to Open a Body Rub Parlor in Victoria . . .

Flemming Sorensen of Vancouver called a news conference Tuesday to announce he'd like to open a body rub parlor in the Victoria area — if no one objects.

Sorensen operates body rub parlors in Duncan and Vancouver.

His company, Garden of Eden Leisure Club, is funded by three Victoria men, he said, but declined to name them. The company is not associated with a boutique of same name in Nootka Court.

A club has been operating in Vancouver for five years and has a membership of 700. The Duncan club, he said, has been going for six months and has a membership of 300.

Membership fees are $75 per year. In addition there is a charge, ranging from $20 to $55, for the body rub, but the price is only $2.50 to come in and play billiards.

Almost nobody comes in to play billiards, he said.

In Victoria, if some municipality is willing, he will hire eight women from this area, between 22 and 35, and they could make about $250 to $300 per week, including tips.

A woman from his Duncan club has been scheduled to attend the Victoria news conference but didn't make it because she couldn't line up a baby sitter.

Sorensen, 43, was born in Denmark but has lived in Canada for the past 20 years. He was a fashion designer under the name Mr. Flemming until he went into the body rub business five years ago.

Although body rubs are the main attraction of the clubs, he said, there are many other things available for a price. These include baths in a swirlpool, exercises with gym equipment, billiards or quiet reading.

Sorensen said he has not yet decided which municipality to approach first but his advisers are urging that he start with Oak Bay.

Oak Bay Mayor Brian Smith was out of town today but acting mayor Ald. John Goult said an application from Sorensen would have no chance at all if there were any sexual overtones to the club.

"I am convinced that the vast majority of the citizens of Oak Bay would have no interest in a club of this type and would be opposed to it being established in Oak Bay if it involves sex in any way."

In Saanich, Ald. Fred Severson said he would oppose an application, if one is made, on the grounds that there is no need for a leisure club. Regular message parlors, saunas and health clubs are already operating in the area.

Esquimalt Mayor Art Young said a similar request was rejected two years ago and there is clearly no need for a body rub parlor anywhere in the capital region.

Victoria's acting mayor, Ald. Bill Tindall, said it seems to him that Sorensen is "putting out a few feelers to see what public and-or political reaction will be" if he decides to establish a massage parlor locally.

Tindall was not prepared to pre-judge the issue, however.

Union Raps Probe Haste

VANCOUVER (CP) — A spokesman for a fishermen's union criticized the federal government Tuesday for setting an early deadline on the West Coast oil ports inquiry, while the president of one of the oil pipeline groups said time is running out, and a port decision is needed by the end of the year.

Jack Nichol, representing the United Fishermen and Allied Workers' Union, told an inquiry hearing the Dec. 31 deadline underestimates "the truly international significance and profound impact on the Canadian economy that any recommendations will have."

Ken Hall president of Trans Mountain Pipe Line Co., said a decision is needed soon on his company's proposal to enlarge the Cherry Point oil port and link it to the pipeline to Edmonton.

He said the $125 million project is the cheapest way to import oil and still protect the environment. It would ensure an adequate oil delivery system to serve both Canada and the United States "for several years to come."

Hall said the coast guards of both countries have established safety regulations that will minimize environmental risks connected with an increase in tanker traffic in Puget Sound.

Nichol said his organization was convinced that entire species of marine life would be killed by oil spills from "clumsy, gargantuan supertankers."

He also said his union would present witnesses who would contradict the assumption that Canada is running out of oil, and witnesses who would detail the threat to B.C.'s fishing industry which every port proposal poses.

Tony Pearse, representing the Kitimat Oil Coalition, composed of 20 organizations, told the inquiry that an oil port on the West Coast is economically unnecessary and environmentally unsound.

Pearse said the coalition would challenge the need to import oil, demonstrate how to minimize environmental and social impact, and contribute to the development of an energy policy for both B.C. and Canada.

Less adamant about a port was David Anderson, former B.C. Liberal leader, and spokesman for the B.C. Wildlife Federation.

The organization has concluded that a port is inevitable and should be built at or west of Port Angeles.

Anderson was highly critical, however, of the decision by Ottawa and the provincial government not to participate directly in the hearings.

He said the governments should express their positions about energy policy so the inquiry could hear provincial concerns.

DONORS SAGGING

Blood donors sagged at a clinic in the Victoria General Hospital nurses' residence Tuesday but 132 of them showed up to come close to the target of 140.

Monday's clinic of 241 kept the week-long campaign 33 ahead of its objective after two days.

Today's clinic is at the University of Victoria's student Union Building, from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m.

The clinic Thursday is at Sanscha Hall in Sidney, from 2 p.m. to 8 p.m., and is being sponsored by the Sidney Rotary Club.

Flight Drinks Dry Up

TORONTO (CP) — Air Canada's licence to serve liquor has been temporarily suspended on some Ontario flights because the airline served drinks to passengers before noon, a licensing official said Tuesday.

R. W. Cooper, executive director of the Liquor Licence Board of Ontario, said licence privileges have been lifted on some flights involving Ottawa, Toronto, Windsor and London for six days beginning Monday.

The ban will apply only to flights which begin in one of the four cities and end in one of the others.

The licence board decided at a hearing July 5 that Air Canada served liquor before the legal bar-opening hour on at least two occasions, he said.

Michael De Wilde, a public relations officer for Air Canada, said the liquor violations were mistakes caused by confusion arising from the different legal serving times in different provinces.

He said the two flights on which the violations occurred originated from outside Ontario and the flight crews apparently became confused because liquor was allowed to be served on the initial stages of the flights but not on the later stages.

He said one of the flights started in Montreal and went to Ottawa, London, Ont., Windsor, Ont., Winnipeg, Calgary and Vancouver. It was legal to serve liquor on the Montreal-to-Ottawa part of the flight but illegal to serve it on the Ottawa-to-London part.

De Wilde said a liquor inspector who was aboard reported the violations.

Attack on Clark Blasted by Dief

SAINT JOHN, N.B. (CP) — Former prime minister John Diefenbaker says he has never seen so much criticism and ridicule heaped upon a national political leader by the news media as that currently directed at Progressive Conservative Leader Joe Clark.

Diefenbaker, a 37-year veteran of the Commons, told a Conservative meeting Tuesday "the leader of the party is being demolished in a way I have never known."

He said he was shocked at the manner in which Clark is being held in contempt by the news media.

At a news conference later, Diefenbaker said he expects an election this fall.

The 81-year-old former prime minister said he could win an election now if he still was leader of the party.

Diefenbaker also said federal gun control legislation passed Monday in the Commons was "a gross tragedy" which had been rammed through by the Liberal party.

He questioned the sincerity of some Commons members who supported the bill, saying "Liberal members will talk to you privately and say it is awful."

To effectively control guns, he said, legislation should be passed requiring a five-year, no-parole sentence for anyone convicted of using a firearm to commit a crime.

Diefenbaker said he found a strong feeling across the country that Prime Minister Trudeau "will demolish all our institutions."

He said Parliament had become emasculated and elected members were becoming puppets who were forced to vote along party lines.

Woman Heads Union

A 28-year-old woman today becomes president of the 2,642-member B.C. Ferry and Marine Workers Union.

Shirley Mathieson, a ramp worker at Tsawwassen terminal, was to assume leadership of the union at noon following her election by delegates to the first BCFMWU convention here Monday and Tuesday.

She defeated George Hornett, veteran leader of the unlicensed marine workers' component of the former ferry workers' union (B.C. Government Employees Union), in balloting Tuesday.

Hornett had been interim president of the reorganized union since January when the licensed and unlicensed components were merged into one by order of the Labor Relations Board.

The convention was held in private because of a rift between factions involving the militant, old guard, reformers and officers, and a desire to present a united front in forthcoming negotiations for a first contract with the government.

An executive meeting today was to deal with bargaining plans and unification of the seven ferry and marine worker components in BCFMWU.

Ferry workers are in the last two weeks of the final contract negotiated when they were part of the government employees' union, and Mathieson said preliminary negotiations for a new contract would start at the end of the month.

The new president was third vice-president since January, a post now filled by former executive member Richard Bell. Other officers include re-elected vice-presidents Matthew Brown, Bob Nash and Peter Blight, and secretary Jim Hedgecock.

The latter was the only candidate elected from the so-called Horner slate.

Mathieson, a university graduate in history and political science with a background in languages from Grenoble and Laval Universities, predicted there would be no loss of militancy in the union.

But her aim will be to foster more education in the principles of trade unionism in the rank and file membership, to lead in turn to more direction for the executive.

She said the contracts of business agents Norman Thornber and Leo Gray had been renewed and that efforts to find a third agent, initially to represent the officer component, are continuing.

'Offensive Antenna' Tiff A Case for Courts—Lum

Residents in the 2000-block Pauls Terrace, upset over a tall CB radio antenna interfering with their seaviews, will have to take their problem to court, Saanich aldermen decided Tuesday.

A group of residents and about 50 citizen band radio operators appeared before the lands, planning and housing committee.

The committee decided to take no action on a request by residents to force removal of a CB radio antenna at 4480 Arsens Place.

"It's a civil matter," Mayor Ed Lum told the group, "a matter strictly between neighbors that can only be resolved by the court."

Municipal solicitor Doug Paterson said in a report tabled at the meeting the municipality had only limited powers on TV and radio antennas. The jurisdiction rests mainly with the federal government.

He said, however, the municipality could probably regulate antenna height by bylaw but felt it would not be practical and noted it wasn't being done anywhere in the province.

Council can't just legislate for one part of the municipality either, Paterson said. Any bylaw would have to apply to everyone throughout the community.

Lum noted "everyone" includes the municipality and observed drily to applause and laughter the municipality owns and operates some of the tallest antennas in the area.

George Howsam, 2040 Paul's Terrace, spokesman for the group of residents, said there is a covenant on property in the area that limits height of buildings to 30 feet.

On that basis he felt there was justification for requesting the removal of the antenna.

Unprecedented Return for Teng

By JAY MATHEWS
Washington pst

HONG KONG — Teng Hsiao-ping, China's most controversial leader, has made an unprecedented comeback from the second political purge of his career, Peking wall posters announced Tuesday night.

The posters, reported by foreign journalists in the Chinese capital, indicated that Teng had been returned to power as part of a ruling triumvirate including Communist party chairman and premier Hua Kuo-feng and vice chairman and defence minister Yeh Chien-ying.

The reinstatement of the 73-year-old outspoken advocate of modern management techniques would be a strong endorsement of the renewed emphasis on foreign trade, labor discipline and material incentive that has marked the post-Mao era in China.

Teng also happens to be the most experienced of top Chinese officials in dealing with Washington, and he might be expected to resume his role as the key negotiator in China's developing relationship with the United States.

The posters, displayed on walls outside the ministry for economic relations with foreign countries and signed by sections of that ministry, said: "Warmly welcome and support the central decision to appoint Comrade Teng Hsiao-ping to the post of party vice-chairman, vice-premier of the State Council, vice-chairman of the military affairs commission and army chief of staff," foreign news agencies reported.

The Peking reports said there was no immediate official confirmation of the appointment, but several high officials and articles in the official media have hinted lately of Teng's return to favor.

Teng

No one attempted to remove the posters, as usually happens with unauthorized announcements.

The appointment as outlined in posters would generally return Teng to the post he held before a group of the late Chairman Mao Tse-tung's most orthodox followers forced his purge early in 1976. His official government post then was first vice-premier of the State Council, and there was no indication Monday night if he would resume that exact title.

When Premier Chou En-lai died 18 months ago, Teng seemed to be Chou's likely successor and stood second only to the ailing Mao in political influence.

Foreign analysts and many Chinese were caught by surprise when Hua, the little-known public security minister, was catapulted over Teng to become acting premier, then premier and finally Communist Party chairman after Mao's death Sept. 9.

Although Communist sources here say Teng has sworn allegiance to Hua, it remains to be seen how Teng will get along with a party chairman far less experienced and 16 years younger than he is.

Teng, a wise-cracking war hero and bureaucrat from Szechnan, stands barely 5 feet 5 but has a towering reputation for getting things done.

He was active in early Chinese Communist organizing in France and Russia in the 1920s, then returned to China to build a reputation as a party organizer and army political officer in the successful civil war against the nationalist government of Chiang Kai-shek.

Kindergarten Chaos

It is impossible to describe in words the depths to which B.C. legislators sink at meetings of the House's public accounts committee. Until one has actually witnessed a meeting of this supposedly important committee, it is inconceivable to think that duly elected MLAs could behave so much like a collection of kindergarten children — and spoiled, bratty kindergarten children at that.

In terms of its ability to perform its statutory functions of reviewing spending of the government and its crown corporations, the committee has become a complete farce. For the past several weeks, more than half its time has been taken up in wrangling about the question of who should have the powers to call and schedule witnesses, (the witnesses usually being officials of the crown corporations whose activities the committee is supposed to be scrutinizing).

Debate on the question has been characterized by the complete absence of logic and rationality on both sides. Most of the time it has not been debate at all, but only political dogfighting, complete with the sorts of namecalling and "You did — I didn't" accusations that usually are not found outside ill-controlled elementary school yards.

In any case, if the questions asked witnesses are the same sort that were asked at Tuesday's committee meeting, it doesn't seem to matter much who invites or schedules the witness — or, indeed, if any witnesses come at all. In three hours of questioning, not more than five or six questions were asked that could actually lead to the enlightenment of the committee or the public.

The rest of the questions were clearly asked in the hope of making political brownie points. NDP members rehashed facts and figures that came out weeks ago at the royal commission looking at the B.C. Railway. Social Credit members traced the railway's history back to the NDP's days in power in the hope of showing that was when all the trouble really started. NDPers promptly went back even further, to the late 1960s and the building of the Fort Nelson extension.

When witnesses from Plateau Mills sawmills appeared, the process was repeated. The NDP wanted the witnesses to recite the list of profits made by the company since the government took it over. The Socreds wanted to complain about possibly improper procedures when the NDP bought the company four years ago.

The MLA who showed the most sense at Tuesday's meeting was Conservative leader Scott Wallace who sat through about 90 minutes of the meeting without saying a word, then left, muttering he had better ways to spend his time.

It would be laughable if it wasn't so serious. At the moment the committee is virtually the only method the legislature has of keeping tabs on the crown corporations.

Legislators from both sides of the house have complained that some of the corporations are out of control and treat the legislators and the public with contempt. After one visit to a public accounts committee meeting, the corporation officials undoubtedly feel that the legislators deserve nothing better than contempt.

Stupid and Spiteful

The fact that Greater Victoria has sewage problems is not in dispute. Most Victorians probably support the central aim of the ad hoc group called Concerned Citizens of B.C. — to stop the indiscriminate dumping of raw sewage into Juan de Fuca Strait.

Members have been handing out leaflets to tourists on the causeway in downtown Victoria entitled: "Welcome to Victoria, the sewer capital of B.C." It warns visitors not to swim in local waters (few do anyway because the salt chuck is chilly year-round) because of the health hazard from sewage pollution.

That is a completely true statement. But the Concerned Citizens have a misplaced sense of protest. What can a non-voting, non-taxpaying visitor, usually a foreign citizen, do about our sewage problems? The local ginger group says telling tourists is one of the few ways it can get the provincial government to listen.

Grab governments by the wallet and their hearts and minds will surely follow, seems to be their strategy. It is, however, a stupid and spiteful move. The Concerned Citizens' beef is with the Capital Regional District and the province, not with Seattle tourists or Vancouver daytrippers.

What other aim is there except to scare away tourists? Discouraging visitors who provide life-sustaining jobs and incomes for many thousands of Victorians is not going to clean up the sewage mess. If anything, a successful campaign by Concerned Citizens would have the ultimate effect of delaying a solution, since fewer tourists mean a sluggish local economy which equals austerity budgets and public works cutbacks.

Concerned Citizens should continue to agitate for a sane sewage policy, but leave third parties like tourists out of it. By all means keep the pressure on the Pollution Control Branch, write letters to MLAs and cabinet ministers, hang CRD chairman Jim Campbell in effigy again. But don't bite the hand that feeds us all.

FRANK RUTTER

Canadian Radio Abroad

LONDON — A complaint familiar to Canadians is being heard over the British airwaves: there is too much foreign investment.

In this case the villain is Canada and the investment is in broadcasting.

The government is at present considering recommendations for restricting what has so far been an unimpeded flow of Canadian money into the privately-owned British radio system, set up three and a half years ago.

It was all very politely put by the committee on the future of broadcasting headed by Lord Annan which reported to the government in March.

"We ourselves consider that commonwealth participation has been too great in local radio and the participation of people and organizations from outside the United Kingdom in providing broadcasting services needs to be watched carefully," said the Annan report, two and a half years in the making.

For commonwealth, read Canada. Two Canadian companies now own more than 20 per cent of what are known as the "independent local" radio stations which operate in restrained competition with the BBC.

The two companies are Standard Broadcasting Corporation and Selkirk Communications, which between them own holdings in 11 of the 19 licensed private stations, an investment totalling almost $3 million out of a total capitalization of $14.5 million.

Canadians pioneered radio here and are big in U.K. radio too.

Annan Commission

In addition, Standard owns 75 per cent of Broadcast Marketing Services, one of the two main agencies for selling radio commercials in Britain.

"Local radio should be genuinely local," the Annan report said. "Nor should the press or international corporations own stations."

One of the major local radio stations examined by the Annan committee was Capital Radio in London, of which Standard owns 29 per cent, and which was branded "the antithesis of what a local radio station should be."

"The output is so full of music and jingles that the advertisers have a hard time trying to beat the station at its own game. The vast area of London enables it to draw a revenue which the smallest TV companies would envy but it does not serve a genuine community."

The two Canadian companies are into other local stations in London, Edinburgh, Newcastle, Wolverhampton, Portsmouth, Liverpool, Swansea, Plymouth, Bradford and Nottingham.

This has recently aroused the interest and the ire of the weekly advertising industry magazine Campaign.

In an editorial the magazine views "with dismay" the "Canadian connection" in British broadcasting. It does not criticize the Canadian companies, in fact it applauds their initiative for getting into an industry which was in dire financial straits in its early years but has now become "a successful and growing medium."

Instead it attacks the agency appointed by the government as watchdog over private radio, the Independent Broadcast Authority, for letting it happen.

"Britain could learn a lesson from the Canadians themselves," says the magazine. "A government directive there restricts foreign holdings to a maximum of 20 per cent on any one station."

This directive is enforced by the Canadian Radio-Television and Telecommunications Commission which was thoroughly examined by the Annan committee with mixed reactions. But the magazine goes on to call for a similar rule in Britain before any more commercial stations go on the air.

Although not so specific, the Annan committee endorses this principle and says that restrictions could be implemented without changing the law. The independent broadcast authority, for instance, already has wide discretion in determining the amount of newspaper ownership in broadcasting, which also concerned Annan.

The committee liked the CRTC's procedures for public hearings, and recommended the government set up a complaints commission and a board of inquiry which could call hearings. But it rejected the idea of a single body with control over broadcasting because it could "spawn a substantial and power-hungry secretariat all the more dangerous because not firmly under ministerial control and all the more confusing because liable to usurp what are strictly speaking the functions of the secretary of state and his civil servant advisers."

No Interference

The government has approved in principle the broad proposals of the Annan report which include a new, commercial TV channel, continued parliamentary responsibilities for broadcasting and guaranteed editorial independence. The specific recommendations, including those on foreign ownership, are to be subject to debate and the government has invited opinions and comments — which Campaign has now given.

There is no suggestion that the Canadians have interfered in local station policy, although Campaign quotes Bob Kennedy, a British director of Standard Broadcasting, as saying that "we want to be involved because we think we have a lot to contribute."

In fact directors of some of the stations in which both companies hold interests say such contributions have been helpful and not interfering.

The main contribution has been money. The Canadian investment in most cases was either to rescue a sick station or help start a new one when local finances could not be found.

The government may decide, as did Canada, that restrictions on cultural input, financial as well as spiritual, are desirable. But it may be more difficult for the government to ensure that private radio gets local money, which is also a problem in the general context of Canadian concern about foreign investment.

Political Football

With reference to the proposed split of the Victoria General Hospital into a northern and southern division, I should like to make it clear that Dr. Peter Banks does not stand alone in his view that this move is an expensive and potentially dangerous mistake. All departments of this hospital, including medicine, surgery, pediatrics, obstetrics and general practice were asked to submit their views, and without exception each made it clear that the proposal was untenable.

We were, however, given no alternative, and presented with the split as a fait accompli. The terms of reference upon which to base our plans were as follows:

(1) A new 300-bed hospital at the Helmcken site with a planned future expansion to five hundred beds to deliver all major services with the exception of pediatrics.

(2) A 169-bed hospital at the present site to deliver some type of service which did not include surgery or emergency care.

Because this city has had no new acute care hospital beds aside from those "donated" by the federal government in the form of the Eric Martin Institute since the Royal wing of the Royal Jubilee Hospital opened in 1962, many of us were afraid to dissociate ourselves completely from the planning. This was because we felt there might be no new beds on the grounds that we were unco-operative, or that we would have another EMI presented to us without any recognition of local needs. We have therefore reluctantly attempted to make some semblance of order out of this proposal.

Most of us would agree with the need for a community hospital in a growing area such as the Helmcken site. This should of course include all basic services to be of use as a community hospital. It does not follow that a viable hospital, albeit out of date as a physical plant, should be destroyed as an acute care facility because of this. If size is an important consideration in the efficient management of a hospital (and we are assured it is by the hospital planners) then surely distance between beds must be another, especially when the two parts of the whole are on either side of the city.

Another built-in problem which we face is the previous decision of the Regional Board to divide obstetrics and pediatrics. New obstetrical facilities are a high priority, and these beds are to be placed in the new hsopital. Next came the decision to remove these new beds from an expected distance of 1½ miles to over seven miles from the regionally designated pediatric beds at the Royal Jubilee Hospital. This makes newborn care less available on an emergency basis.

Adding to this that the proposed 75-bed community hospital for North Saanich is just over 10 miles from the proposed new 300-bed hospital, I would say that government and regional planning of hospital facilities must be very much a political football. I am afraid that we, the general public, are the losers, both in money and quality of medical care.

I feel that the public should be made aware of our dilemma as a profession in that we must aid and abet a plan which we are told is inevitable, whether we approve it or not. — Patricia K. Johnston, MD, CCFP, Chief, Department of General Practice, Victoria General Hospital.

Losing Freedom

What this nation needs desperately is a leader or leaders with guts enough to demand a responsible society — instead of continually forcing one segment of society to shoulder the responsibilities of another — be it the responsibility of other men's deserted wives, other men's criminal defence, other men's cultural and sports activities and other men's failing business enterprises.

While citizens are fully prepared to accept a community responsibility for such things as police and fire services, roads, schools, hospitals, the sick, elderly and disabled, when governments go beyond this norm to spend our tax dollars like a prostitute let loose at a perfume counter, it's time we took a long, hard look at the direction in which this nation is headed.

For when Big Brother starts perpetuating a "share the wealth and equalize the poverty" syndrome, the democratic system is badly eroded. Every time citizens relinquish a responsibility to any level of government, they become that much more dependent upon government and lose a little more of their individual freedom and liberty. — Patricia Young, 1030 Nanton Avenue, Vancouver.

Law vs Justice

It is gratifying to read of Scott Wallace's endorsation of the parliamentary subcommittee report on the federal penitentiary system. Prison conditions have been so clearly exposed that the government in Ottawa cannot plead ignorance.

It has been said that all prisoners are political prisoners and in some measure this is true as long as the legislators and Francis Fox defend a system of brutality that exists in this "enlightened society." As the process of law must be carried out to its proper conclusion, one must ask, "If this is the law, is it justice?" Solitary confinement, degradation, brutality, hopelessness, are spawned of injustice. The courts cannot wipe their hands clean of a man's fate as soon as he is led away.

Let us have a prison system we do not have to apologize for. Human rights belong to all members of society, not just for those of us who are lucky enough to breathe the summer air. — Spectator.

Double Standard

Canadians in the lower walks of life must take alarm at the double standards of justice which appear in our courts. The premier of Quebec is fined $25 for what amounts to criminal negligence in killing a person, but a driver in Victoria is fined $500, loses his licence to drive (and his job) for driving with an over .08 reading. High-ranking officers of the law are convicted of break and enter and theft, but no sentence is meted out. In paradox, anyone here convicted of shoplighting food from a billion dollar supermarket is normally heavily fined or imprisoned.

Our once highly-respected RCMP now appears to make its own laws as they engage in selected illegal activities. Some of the members are heavy drinkers, but they can drink and drive with impunity, for who is to catch the catchers? Their ranks close swiftly to protect their guilty.

As we leave on our annual vacation this year I shall not ask the RCMP to keep an eye on my home. I actually feel safer if they are unaware of my absence, for none of us know just what might happen to our property.

Many years ago I was engaged in a war to supposedly keep our country free, especially from the threat of another police state. I'm afraid we have lost that battle.—Just Another Citizen, Duncan.

Moral Values

I do not agree with the views expressed by your correspondent P. C. Malone, Teaching Morals as I do not feel that the school is the right place to teach religion.

I was sent to an Anglican boarding school and apart from a daily service we were taught scriptures as part of our curriculum. In addition on Sundays, if one had been confirmed, one had to go to communion and two other services. I can assure your correspondent that such compulsion turned the vast majority of the boys against religion and surely that is not a good objective.

Your correspondent talks about moral values but surely it is not only the youth of today who lack moral values. One has only to look around the world and see the corruption and deceit practised by world leaders, many of whom were products of very strict young backgrounds. I will quote just one as an example — Richard Nixon.

During my service as an officer in the First World War, I found so many who had not enjoyed the advantages of a private religious school but were, in fact, men with high principles formulated in their homes and the churches they attended. On the other hand I found many who had indeed enjoyed the advantages of a strict and religious school were without basic moral ethics. In view of my experience, I believe that one gains basic moral values in the home and the churches and not in compulsory religion in the schools.

Surely if the churches had fulfilled the teachings and mission of Christ we would have a much better world today. I do not believe that the only qualification of a good Christian is to attend church on a Sunday. I think it is far more important to be a Christian seven days a week. Your correspondent quotes the basic principle of religion—love they neighbor — but when one looks around the world today surely it is hard to find that being practised in any country.

I was blessed by the church when I was dispatched to kill Germans in the First World War and Germans were blessed when they were sent to kill the allies. I cannot imagine Christ giving such blessings.

I have lived in many parts of the world and I have found poverty and self-interest as the basic ingredient of most countries. One rarely heard a word from the churches protesting the injustices to which the vast majority were subjected. I recall in Latin America one heard the expression "se nace para sufrir" but one rarely found a dignitary of any church who was suffering or doing anything to rectify the injustices which afflicted the vast majority.

We only have to examine ourselves here in Canada and it is all greed and a rat-race with the crumbs being thrown to the have-nots.

I am not against independent schools and in fact I have met some very fine products of these schools, but I have also met some very fine products of the government schools. I sent my two daughters to private schools but I did not ask McGeer or anyone else to help me defray the fees — M. P. B. Wrixon, 301-1701 Cedar Hill X Road.

London Improved

May I congratulate Mr. Wrixon on his courageous letter in which he rebuts many of the derogatory statements Max Low made about London. During the days he was there it was when the Queen's Silver Jubilee was being celebrated and so there were over a million visitors from all parts of the globe, including many Canadians, who, like our own citizens were probably prone to drop a bit of litter on the streets. This together with the thousands lining the routes of the procession must have created a problem for the city cleaners.

It was my pleasure to be in London for periods of five to six weeks during the past two summers and I could not but notice these cleaners arriving on their jobs early in the mornings with their large brushes and small barrows and how efficient they were in cleaning up all the trash. One morning when going for a paper I met one who had seen me a few times and this was his greeting: "Morning, guy." He seemed happy in his work. In my long walks (for that is the best way to see London), I had to admire how they had cleaned up so many buildings with sand blasting, especially the Law Courts which had a completely new look. The same applied to some buildings in Chelsea near where I lived when in town.

There appeared to be a lot of construction going on and I noticed that the men started work about 7:30 a.m. Their equipment was the most modern I've ever seen anywhere.

So please, Mr. Low, don't drag London down any more than you have done with your 10-day experience which, as you must admit, is no time to see London at its best. I also visited Petticoat Lane and it too was in much better condition than formerly. The stall holders were all dressed in nice suits and hats and no sign of any in tweed caps and mufflers.

Why don't you, Max Low, take a walk along Douglas Street some Sunday morning and see the mess there?

You never mentioned anything about the wonderful job done with the River Thames and compare that with our lack of sewage disposal in Victoria and the feeble efforts being made to get rid of it. — A. D. McCrindle, 404-999 Southgate.

Pollution of the Mind Peddled for TV Profit

By PAUL ST. PIERRE
The Sun

Pollution of the mind is different from pollution of our air, water and food, or so we visionary, socialist utopians are being told by the television industry.

Unless a diligent search of the past month's files failed us, this was the weight and burthen of the industry's response to the LaMarsh royal commission on television violence.

A commercial TV spokesman found that the Ontario royal commission's report "smacked of overriding government involvement." A cable TV industry spokesman used the words "visionary, socialist utopia."

That's the trouble when fat accumulates around the brain — you can only shout or squeal if criticized.

Since these scattered, intemperate outbursts, there has been silence about how TV teaches our children violence for profit. Well, not complete silence. Some people will keep talking.

A week ago the national convention of the United Church of Christ in the U.S. accused the U.S. television industry of the following:

Debasing U.S. culture. Degrading people. Exploiting sex and violence. Falsifying human relations.

A more damning indictment of any industry is hard to bring to mind but it's a small church, only 1.8 million adherents, and the violence broadcasters may convince themseles that this, like the strictures of the American Medical Association and a few dozen other public bodies, can be dismissed as the sort of thing you have to put up with from amateur critics.

The link between public violence and TV violence becomes more clearly identified with each passing month. Psychiatrists, educators and commissions of inquiry cry out alarms. Even the advertisers, not people who normally pass up an easy buck, become fearful of association with the viler kneecap-breaker shows. The industry just rambles on, accasionally uttering a few pious promises of reform.

We socialist, visionary utopians were a long time understanding Minimata disease also. That doesn't mean we never get the message. We're just a little slow, that's all.

To help us in our slow learning process, let's review a few of the findings of the Ontario royal commission, the result of two years of studies. (Emphasis by Bold type, throughout, is ours.)

Is there a cause-and-effect relationship between increasing crime and TV violence? Yes, said the commission quite simply. They couldn't weigh this effect. Mind pollution is less quantifiable than mercury poisoning. But it is there, they say.

"Many people are becoming more indifferent to violence being perpetrated against others, as well as becoming more fearful for their own safety both at home and in the streets."

What of the highly profitable TV networks which pump this hazardous substance into our living rooms?

"Entertainment television spokesmen offered no defence on moral or ethical grounds, obviously there being none to offer, but argued that competitively — to continue to make profits—they had no choice. They seemed to place profit above responsibility."

The commissioners return to this theme again in their report.

"The constantly increasing flow of television violence on the U.S. networks and the Canadian private networks and private stations (the publicly-owned Canadian Broadcasting Corp. has a better record) goes on at all hours, including times when children are watching. There is no doubt whatever, from the evidence of all sources, that this escalation is based on constant pressure to maximize profits and is done without regard for the effects upon audiences. To put it explicitly, it is the result of placing profits above social responsibility."

And, notes the commission, "any other industry that is proved to be, or even suspected of putting profits above the public good is challenged by governments or the public and brought to account."

The question left in the wake of this and other damning indictments is not whether the TV industry will be brought to account. The only question is when.

Judging by out experience in the better known areas of air, water and food pollution, it may be several years.

Most of us can remember that industries dismissed the first warnings about chemical pollutants and carcinogenic foods as the vaporings of cranks. Later, when evidence accumulated that something was indeed wrong, we were told it was not very wrong. And, next in the progression, we were told the clean-up measures were prohibitively expensive.

The public accepted industry's indifference and chidings for a few years but the public, praise be, will not accept harmful products forever. Not even in the high name of returning profits to shareholders.

And so it will be with the television industry, an industry desperately ill with an old ailment — fatty degeneration of the soul.

'These are Not Easy Times in the Kremlin'

By HEDRICK SMITH
New York Times

Soviet leader Leonid Brezhnev has a reputation as a fanatic soccer and hockey fan, but last week he showed up at the Kremlin Hall of Congresses for an evening of ballet. He took the applause of the audience from his spot in the main box ostentatiously flanked by Yuri Andropov, the head of the secret police, and Dmitri Ustinov, the Defence Minister.

It was the kind of appearance that attracts attention among Kremlin-watchers who have come to feel that such occasions have symbolic importance beyond the evening's excitement. It seemed that Brezhnev was trying to make a point or two, to demonstrate that in spite of reports of his failing health he is capable of sitting through a ballet, and to show publicly that the armed forces and the security police, two principal power centres along with the Communist Party, are solidly with him. The touch of symbolism was especially timely for Brezhnev for these are not easy times in the Kremlin.

The centrifugal forces in the world Communist movement are tugging ever harder away from the centre. At home, projections for his pet, 15-year economic plan, running to 1990, show labor and capital shortages ahead and a tightening squeeze on energy supplies. Relations with countries as diverse as China and Egypt stubbornly refuse to improve and even his recent visit to France was not a notable success. Most crucially, the aging Soviet leader, who has seen four occupants in the White HOuse since he came to power in 1964, has yet to discover how to deal effectively with President Carter.

Hardliners Upset

There are signs that, internally, Brezhnev feels on the defensive. Privately, well-placed Muscovites tell foreign visitors that provincial party leaders grumble that the Soviet leader has not delivered as much development money as he promised them; that ideological hardliners are upset that he is not tougher with Carter on issues like human rights; that military and security circles are peeved because he let Andrei Gromyko, the Foreign Minister, carry on arms control talks with the United States so quickly after President Carter put forward what Moscow regarded as a scandalously one-sided arms proposal in March.

Externally, the Soviet dispute with Santiago Carrillo, the Spanish Communist leader, has become more than an exercise in polemics. From Moscow's perspective, the ideological and political independence of Carrillo's brand of Eurocommunism contains a dangerous germ that could infect not only Eastern Europe but elements of Soviet society as well. Ever since Lenin, the Kremlin has been fanatically suspicious of "splitters" who refuse to kneel before Soviet authority and accept Moscow's lead.

To the Kremlin, Carrillo's assertion that Russia is not truly a Communist or even a Socialist state is unpardonable heresy. But in reality, the little Spanish party is probably less of a concern than the large, powerful Italian Communist party with its decentralized power, local factory committees and willingness to live with democratic processes.

Similarly, the Kremlin feels threatened by the relentless American pressure on human rights. This is not so much because the K.G.B. secret police cannot control and curtail the small band of active dissidents. It is rather because Brezhnev and other party elders sense the broader ideological non-conformism among the passive dissenters in Soviet society. The generation of intellectuals whose faith in the system was shattered in their student days when Nikita Khrushchev exposed Stalin 20 years ago, is now middle-aged and cynical.

BREZHNEV
. . . on the defensive

It was not only to assert its sovereignty and to protest against "outside interference" in its internal affairs but also to shield these silent non-conformists, that the Kremlin barred Malcolm Toon, the United States Ambassador, from delivering a July 4th address on Soviet television. Toon's remarks included one taut sentence that asserted: "Americans will continue to state publicly their belief in human rights and their hope that violations of these rights wherever they occur will end." But the Soviet regime's troubles with the new American president run far broader than mere pique at what the Kremlin has come to regard as Carter's unreasonable and therefore dangerous campaign on human rights.

Symptomatic of the distrust generated over the last six months was the Soviet reaction to Carter's recent decision to halt production of the B-1 bomber. Rather than see some favorable sign in this gesture, the Kremlin had its commentators complain instead that Carter's decision to go ahead with development of the Cruise missile "seriously complicates efforts for the limitation of the strategic arms race."

From the outset, Carter has thrown Brezhnev off balance. It is as if they were temperamentally ill suited for each other — the younger American leader anxious to make his mark with bold new proposals, the aging Soviet leader uneasy at change and innovation, and anxious to preserve Soviet-American relations as he had come to know them under the Nixon and Ford administrations.

Uneasiness

The general uneasiness in Moscow about Carter and where he is headed contributes to Brezhnev's defensiveness. At lower levels, Soviet officials confide to Western counterparts that those who played moderate roles in the development of cultural, economic and political accords with the United States during the heyday of detente four or five years ago are now being castigated by hardliners for allegedly having exceeded their authority. To defend themselves, some of the former moderates are now reverting to old-fashioned polemics against Washington. And Brezhnev himself takes trouble to carefully select his partners for attending the ballet.

It's easier than using manure

Another Threat to Ozone

By DANIEL BEHRMAN

The stratosphere's ozone layer, which screens the earth from harmful ultra-violet radiation, could be reduced by more than 10 per cent within a century if the use of chemical fertilizer continues to increase, according to a Harvard University scientist.

Dr. Michael B. McElroy, of the Harvard Centre for Earth and Planetary Physics, gave this warning at the Second Symposium on the Origin and Distribution of the Elements held at UNESCO House in Paris last May. The symposium was organized by the International Association of Geochemistry and by UNESCO.

According to Dr. McElroy nitrogen in chemical fertilizers eventually ends up acting to reduce the ozone layer.

In an interview, McElroy compared his figure of 10 per cent to the predicted loss of one per cent of the ozone layer if a fleet of 1,000 Concordes were to be operated. The figure is also over double the 5 per cent loss feared as the result of the use of fluorocarbon gas in aerosol sprays, a prospect that has led the United States government to propose a complete ban on this gas by mid-1979.

"We can solve the supersonic transport problem by not flying and we can solve the fluorocarbon problem by not spraying, but we can't solve the fertilizer problem by not eating," McElroy remarked. "In fact, this is not a fertilizer but a food problem.

"It would be premature to take action now, but this is a potentially serious problem," he added. "If I were to come up with a crash program to solve it, I would say that we would have to find ways to re-use nitrogen, to waste less food and to avoid or minimize the use of animals as intermediaries in food production."

The difficulty is one of economics as well: it is much easier to use clean chemical fertilizer than to haul huge loads of manure around a country.

The chain of events linked to this threat against the ozone layer begins when fertilizer is spread in the fields. Most of it is taken up by crops, but 30 per cent runs off into rivers and ground water. Then, McElroy believes, it is transformed into nitrous oxides in certain well-defined areas, principally swamps, lakes and estuaries. A similar change occurs when the nitrogen incorporated into food finds its way into cesspools or sewage treatment plants. When it reaches the stratosphere, nitrous oxide acts as a catalyzing agent to reduce the ozone layer.

He does not believe, on the basis of measurements he has made, that the ocean is acting as a sink, taking up nitrous oxide. If this were the case, there would be no danger on any time scale of concern to present-day mankind. On the contrary, the main source of nitrous oxide seems to be on dry land.

World fertilizer use now stands at some 50 million tons of nitrogen per year. It is estimated that this figure will rise to nearly 200 million tons by the year 2000. While the amount of land used for agriculture has remained relatively constant over the past 15 years, food production has gone up by 15 per cent thanks mainly to the increased use of fertilizer. The trend is likely to continue.

McElroy states that he is not in any sense making an appeal for regulation of fertilizer but rather for more study of the problem and for agricultural practices that might cut back on the need for fertilizer with a minimum impact on food yields.

A Matter of Self-Perception

By SCOTT YOUNG
The Globe and Mail

I get a lot of letters from people who seem to think that I drink a lot, or at any rate harm humanity by mentioning beer or booze without an accompanying sermon. Mrs. Marion Farr of Thornhill brings it up again (pardon me) with regard to rowdyism in provincial parks. I said there was no obvious solution.

"There is one thing you and your fellow sportsmen and journalists of whatever medium could do, and that is to stop eulogizing the use of alcohol," she wrote, employing a familiar argument. "With the encouragement and promotion that is given by almost everyone to its consumption, the kind of behavior which took place in the campaign is inevitable." There's more, to the point that I've treated teetotalers as little old ladies or simpletons (which I don't think is the case; many people I admire are non-drinkers, some being reformed alcoholics).

Anyway, this is the world we live in. Alcohol is not going to go away. Neither are other drugs, such as marijuana, or even tobacco. Obviously, it is possible to handle all of them if one takes care. I would support banning of liquor and beer advertising of the so-called "lifestyle" line because that is dangerously one-sided. But I don't think anything would be served by acting as if alcohol did not exist. Even to consider such a course as a solution — well, we've all heard of ostriches who stick their heads in the sand, believing that if you can't see something, it doesn't exist.

There is a lot of support for the contrary idea: that people, in developing their own habits, do so from their own needs and capabilities, rather than in emulation of others. Very few politicians try to drink as Churchill did. A ballplayer who equated Babe Ruth's home run hitting with his notoriously wild off-the-field behavior would be a nut. A writer who thinks he can make it sing by drinking like Malcolm Lowry or Brendan Behan will soon find that all he has is a lot of headaches, and not many usable words on paper.

What I'm mainly concerned with is moderation. A case of beer in a car full of teenagers, flinging the empties out on the roadsides, is a bad way to go. A couple of guys at a ballpark with a bottle of Crown Royal they're pouring into Cokes (this happened last week) get dizzier and dizzier, and wouldn't want to have replayed the next day the silly judgments they made while loaded. I think the sight of a drunk, especially a drunken parent, far from promoting the use of alcohol, inhibits it.

It is all a matter of self-perception. A young person projecting that sight of the effects of alcohol into his or her own concept of self is likely to say no to an offer of a drink some other time, if the young person has a normal concern for his or her own image. I know people who got drunk once, by carelessness, and were so affronted by it that they take care forevermore.

Of course, maybe I'm a hard case, rationalizing my own style of living in the way most people do, whatever their habits — whether it's drinking a lot, drinking a little, or teatotaling.

Comely Pianist Runs Scales From Rock to Rachmaninov

By AUDREY JOHNSON
Times Staff

Last year when Kaleidoscope and John Minshall produced the musical Cabaret as a summer-long attraction audiences were intrigued by the all-girl band—especially its comely pianist-leader and the graceful gestures with which she cued her musicians and established tempos.

You can't see Lorna Paterson this year, more's the pity, but she's there at the Empress Hotel behind the set of Jacques Brel Is Alive and Well and Living in Paris. She's doing an equally fine job of performing and leading her ensemble for the Allen Houghton-Kaleidoscope production.

Lorna is the dark blonde-haired peach-skinned and talented daughter of Dr. and Mrs. J. L. Paterson of Victoria. Her own headquarters at present are in Edmonton where she is completing the Master of Music program at the University of Alberta and also acting as a teaching and academic assistant in the Department of Music.

Such a background may seem a bit unlikely for the leader of an up-tempo cabaret band of Berlin and Paris of the 20s, 30s and 40s. But Lorna says that is only because people tend to pigeonhole musicians as either classical or popular.

"Actually most competent classical musicians are really flexible," she says, "able to play any kind of music from jazz to jive and rock."

She had never been involved with musical theatre until she was invited to do Cabaret through an acquaintance in the cast after the originally scheduled music director dropped out.

"I was a little startled," she says, "but I wanted to spend the summer in Victoria and I needed a job."

"At first I felt terribly foolish in the wig and makeup and scanty costume," she says. "I was accustomed to wearing a long dress, bowing to the audience and playing Beethoven. But I soon got into the act and enjoyed it thoroughly — bouncing to the rhythm, the tatoo on my shoulder — everything."

Lorna first came to Victoria at 16 when her father retired here. She studied piano and theory at the Conservatory of Music for two years and then entered the Bachelor of Music program at University of Victoria, majoring in performance and continuing her piano studies with Robin Wood.

In 1975 she gained her B.Mus degree with distinction, won the Silver Anniversary Award for the open recital class in the Victoria Music Festival and received her Licentiate of Music diploma from the Western Board, having achieved her ARCT diploma three years earlier.

This summer's engagement to do Brel followed naturally on her success with Cabaret.

"I love being with theatre people," she says. "There's something special about them — stimulating — the Brel people are just fine to work with; we have a good ensemble feeling and it's getting better. We listen all the time and make changes as the show runs, incorporating more nuances, getting deeper into interpretation."

PATERSON

Brel opened at the Empress June 30 and will run through to at least mid-August. With Lorna in the instrumental ensemble are Jamie Moor, a fine Canadian guitarist who plays guitar and mandolin, imported, string bassists Timothy Stacey and Brian Tetlow, and UVic's and Victoria Symphony's Dale Price on percussion.

When the summer is over, and Brel has been sent back to Paris, Lorna will return to Edmonton for the final stage of her Master's program. And afterwards?

"Oh, I only plan one year at a time at present," she says. "I'd like to come back to the coast — probably to teach and perform in chamber ensembles. Classical music is my first love so, of course, that is the major thing in my future. Still I'll always keep an interest in musical theatre now I've experienced it."

CHILDREN CITED IN FIRE

Children playing with matches are believed responsible for a fire that caused about $8,500 damage to a house at 1114 Catherine Tuesday night.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert Waters and their two children were having supper when they discovered the back porch on fire at 7:30 p.m.

Waters and a neighbor got a garden hose but couldn't stop the fire which swept into an attic and broke through the roof.

Victoria firemen quickly extinguished the blaze.

A fire department spokesman said the fire originated in a chesterfield on the porch, and probably smouldered for some time before bursting into flame. Children had been playing in the area a short while before.

Waters told firemen he had heard a crackling noise on the porch for about 10 minutes. It sounded like a drier had been turned on, he said.

Before The Judge

A 25-year-old man who pleaded guilty Tuesday in Victoria provincial court to robbery with violence was remanded in custody until Aug. 22 for a pre-sentence report and sentence.

Ronald Piette, of no fixed address, appeared before Judge Blake Allan and pleaded guilty to a Feb. 3 robbery in Halifax.

Court was told Piette and a companion robbed a 74-year-old taxi driver of $75, and that Piette used a length of electrical cord to strangle the man while his companion beat him. They then dumped the unconscious cab driver on a snowbank and took his taxi to St. Stephen, N.B., about 400 miles away.

Piette gave himself up July 9 to Victoria city policy because, crown counsel Robert Mulligan said, he believed he was wanted on a nationwide warranty for murder. Mulligan said the driver survived the attack.

Sharon Elizabeth Olmstead, 30, was given a suspended sentence after pleading guilty to nine counts of false pretences.

Court was told that Mrs. Olmstead, who gave police an address of the Yates Hotel, 712 Yates, opened an account at the Canadian Imperial Bank of Commerce, 2420 Douglas on Feb. 25 with $3 and proceeded to write cheques totalling $514.36 between April 15 and June 11.

She was also placed on eight months' probation and ordered to make restitution to The Bay, Sears and Eaton's within four months.

Andrew Laird Haggart, 30, of 4432 Tindall, was released on $1,000 surety bail on charges of possession of a restricted weapon and carrying a concealed weapon.

Haggart was arrested by Victoria city police Monday after a car was checked at Government and Queens at about 7 p.m.

Allan also stipulated that Haggart was not to be in possession of any firearms or weapons during the period of his release.

Haggart was remanded until next Tuesday for election of his trial method.

A 22-year-old woman who pleaded guilty to switching price tags in Woolworth's on June 24 was handed a suspended sentence, four months' probation and 35 hours of community service work.

Winnifred Joy Maddigan, 921 Fort, pleaded guilty to fraud. The court was informed she switched the price tag on a shirt from $8 to $3 and on two scarves from $2.96 to $1.96.

Legal aid lawyer Lenore Boyes said the woman switched the tags on the scarves because she believed the store's pricing policy on the article was inconsistent and she did it to get scarves of a color she wanted.

Dale Robert Ferguson, who was remanded one day for a pyschologist's report, was handed a one-day sentence and a suspended sentence by Judge Fred Green.

Ferguson pleaded guilty Monday to theft under $200 and mischief causing wilful damage Saturday night.

Court was told Ferguson stole a package of cakes valued at $1.09 from Mac's Convenient Store, 265 Menzies, and, after he was arrested by Victoria city police, kicked in a window of the police vehicle.

Green gave Ferguson a one-day sentence, one year's probation, and ordered him to take any medical, psychological or phychiatric treatment as directed and gave him a suspended sentence and an order for restitution of $105.23 for the car window on the mischief charge.

Blowout Well Back in Service

STAVANGER, Norway (Reuter) — Production has begun again at the Bravo platform in the Ekofisk oilfield following a blow out three months ago, the Norwegian oil directorate said Monday. About 20,000 tons of oil were dumped into the sea during the eight-day blowout. Six of the 15 wells operated from the platform were operating Monday and oil will be flowing from another four wells within the next few days.

Defence Staff Cut

WASHINGTON (Reuter) — U.S. Secretary of Defence Harold Brown ordered Monday 792 jobs cut from his Pentagon staff by next February, a reduction of about 22 per cent. The reductions will bring the defence secretary's staff down to 2,812 jobs. Brown said the cuts should be balanced between civilian and military positions where possible.

Ballet Date for Margaret

NEW YORK (CP) — The chase was on when Margaret Trudeau surfaced in public Tuesday night to watch the National Ballet of Canada perform Swan Lake.

Mrs. Trudeau, estranged wife of the Canadian prime minister, was invited to attend the performance after spending three weeks with her three small boys at Harrington Lake.

She arrived with three guests shortly before the opening curtain and they sat in the private box of Tony Bliss, executive director of the Metropolitan Opera House.

Despite the heat wave that has been affecting theatre attendance in the wake of the blackout last Wednesday, the Met was nearly packed for Swan Lake with Karen Kain and Frank Augustyn dancing the leading roles of the swan queen and the prince.

The principal dancers favored privacy during a tense period for the National Ballet in the first Swan Lake of the company's two-week New York season. But publicity for Mrs. Trudeau's visit already had been arranged including a brief trip backstage during the first intermission for photographers.

Mrs. Trudeau looked radiant in a white knit dress holding a rose with Miss Kain and Augustyn at her side.

She talked for a couple of minutes with the dancers in a low voice. As she was leaving, she said a few words in a reply to a question about how she felt about the National Ballet. She said it was a great young company and she was proud to be watching the Canadians, particularly Miss Kain, perform at the Met.

One of Mrs. Trudeau's escorts was Bruce Nevins, president of a French mineral water company now busy promoting its product in North America. Margaret visited the southern France mineral springs earlier this year.

She is expected to return to Ottawa this weekend.

BIG JOHN RILED UP

WINNIPEG — Singer Johnny Cash said Tuesday he's so upset about a review of The Carter Family that he's planning to renounce the honorary citizeneship conferred on him by Winnipeg Mayor Stephen Juba.

Cash made the comment in an interview following publication of the review in The Free Press.

Lee Schacter reviewed the Monday night concert given here by Cash and The Carter Family, which includes his wife June Carter.

Schacter described Cash himself as a first-rate performer, but had this to say about The Carter Family:

"About all one can say of them is that they made themselves heard. They were loud. They belted out their songs, and June growled a lot."

Cash called the review ridiculous and insulting and said he wanted an apology from the newspaper.

HEARING SLATED

TORONTO — A preliminary hearing will be held Dec. 2 for Rolling Stones guitarist Keith Richard charged with possession of heroin for the purpose of trafficking and possession of cocaine.

Lawyer Austin Cooper, appearing Tuesday on Richard's behalf, said the British guitarist was responding well to treatment for heroin addiction at a psychiatric clinic in New York City.

Richard, charged in late February during a Toronto appearance by the Rolling Stones, was not in court. He is free on $25,000 bail.

The hearing will determine whether there is enough evidence to send Richard to trial.

MANHATTAN SKYLINE makes backdrop for Chris Reeve, who takes title role in new multi-million production of Superman. Big budget film to be released next year is far cry from Saturday morning quickies of two decades ago. Reeve, incidentally, is no relation of Steve Reeves who played the Man of Steel for movies and TV in those days.

Of Gable and Aging: Crawford Relates All

NEW YORK (Reuter) — Actress Joan Crawford, who seldom gave interviews, frankly discussed her affair with Clark Gable and her feelings about aging in an article published today, more than two months after her death.

Before she died in her New York apartment in May the 69-year-old actress spoke at length to author Roy Newquist for an article published in the current issue of McCall's magazine.

"Yes, Clark and I had an affair, a glorious affair, but it didn't end up in marriage for three reasons: both of us were already involved in one, happily or not; we were both skittish about saying 'I do' again; and we became good friends."

The affair grew out of shared feelings of insecurity, she said, feelings that they were both disguised in public images they hardly recognized and that neither of them could act and might be rejected by the public.

"I hated growing older . . . and I didn't like second billings and I didn't like the fact that the public preferred to watch Lana Turner or Betty Grable or Judy (Garland).

If older people say they enjoy growing old, "I think they're either lying through their teeth or they've grown senile," Miss Crawford said.

One poignant memory for her, she said, was waiting for an elevator to take her to make a speech at a 1974 sales meeting of Pepsi-Cola, of which her fourth husband, Alfred Steele, was president. She had spent two hours applying make-up to disguise the ravages of age.

"I actualy heard one woman beside me saying to another, 'See her? She used to be Joan Crawford'. . . ."

DISGUSTING

KEMPTON PARK, South Africa — A deacon in the conservative Dutch Reformed Church claimed he brought back pornographic playing cards from a trip abroad as a warning to South Africans against the evils of smut.

His lawyer said Deacon Cornelius Taljaart, 37, wanted to "show people how appalling pornography was overseas."

The judge did not find the story entirely convincing.

Noting Taljaart brought back not one deck but four, he sentenced the churchman to a fine of $690 or 200 days imprisonment.

Farmer Really Gushing Now

GLANBROOK, Ont. — Don Weylie, a 50-year-old farmer from this community near Hamilton, won't have to worry about his heating bills next winter.

Weylie began to drill for gas in a field three weeks ago and this week his $5,000 gamble paid off.

"It now looks like we are going to have lots of gas," Weylie said. "I should be able to heat my house without any trouble at all."

Weylie said he has been paying about $700 a year for heating.

"There were a number of wells around here back in the late 1800s," he said. "But during the Depression people didn't keep them up and they stopped producing."

A neighboring farmer drilled a gas well recently and now is heating his home and barn with gas, Weylie said. However, he will keep his oil furnace as a standby unit.

Fred Moerschfelder of Fisherville, Ont., who is drilling the well for Weylie, said about 75 per cent of people who drill for gas find it, "but you shouldn't try drilling in areas that don't have a history of gas."

Wormy Tribute

LONDON — Sam Andrews, a 14-year-old student at Loughborough Grammar School in Leicester, ate 10 plump, boiled worms for his Queen.

The student is one of millions of Britons who have raised money for the Queen's silver jubilee appeal, which started April 24 with Prince Charles giving a televised address. The money goes to help young people serve the community.

Andrews, who earned the equivalent of $52.70 from schoolmates and their parents for his June 15 stunt, said: "It was worth it. However, I don't think I'll be eating any more of them."

He said he felt a bit queasy after the snack.

The jubilee fund has collected the equivalent of $5.95 million so far, much of it in small donations.

You Can 'Wheel' Funds to Disabled Athletes

People who have never sat in a wheelchair will get a chance to pilot one through a "slalom" course in Centennial Square July 30 as a local group strives to raise funds for disabled athletes.

Laurey Adams, spokesman for Wheelchair Sports Victoria, said Tuesday that $3,000 is needed to help meet transportation and accommodation costs of seven young athletes from Victoria who will take part in a national competition for the physically disabled next month.

The fund-raising event in Centennial Square will charge a small fee to people who want to try the wheelchair obstacle course and test their efforts against the best time achieved by local young people confined to wheelchairs.

There will be live entertainment as well as games and raffles throughout the day, Adams said. There will also be demonstrations of the sports local disabled athletes are involved in and the athletes will be available to answer questions.

The local branch of the Canadian Wheelchair Sports Association at 2535 Government has existed only since last October. About 60 people, most of them between 18 and 25, take part in a program which includes swimming each Saturday at the Oak Bay Recreation Centre, track and field Mondays and Wednesdays at the University of Victoria, volleyball, archery and table tennis.

There are about 15 serious competitors, she said, and seven of them have qualified in provincial competition last month to represent B.C. at the Canadian Games for the Physically Disabled at Edmonton Aug. 20-27.

Those who will go to Edmonton if the money can be found are Linda Hunt and Madalaine Anderson, Gary Birch, Trevor Halliday, Peter Steel, Ken Wright and Robert Sorenson, who at 13 is the youngest competitor.

For any disabled who need transportation for the fund-raising day, they are asked to call 383-3013 before next Monday.

Hydro-Quebec

Hydro-Quebec has offered $125 million in bonds on the Canadian market bearing an interest rate of 9¾ per cent. The issue is for a period of 22½ years because it is an addition to a 1975 issue, said the company's finance director. Edmond Lemieux said the issue bears the same due date as the 1975 issue — Feb. 6, 2,000. The issue is dated Aug. 6 and its expected yield is 9.86 per cent. The vice-president of Levesque Beaubien Inc., one of the underwriters, said the issue has sold well since it was offered Monday at one point below par. The Quebec Deposit and Investment Fund bought $55 million of the bonds and Hydro-Quebec's pension fund took $10 million, Pommier said.

Falcon Steel

Ltd. of Calgary has been found not guilty on a charge under the Occupational Health Act. The charge was laid last Sept. 27 when two of the company's workers were injured while working on a construction project. The trial was held in May and June in the provincial magistrate's court and the judgment dismissing the charge was handed down late last week. Acting-Judge Roy Wellman ruled the Crown did not prove Falcon had been negligent.

Daon

The Daon Development Corp., of Calgary has purchased 20 acres of land near Portage la Prairie for the construction of a $6 million shopping centre. No price was revealed but John Phiessen, president of Jolin Holdings, former owners of the land, said completion date of the centre is still May 1, 1978. The centre will house 220,000 square feet of space, including a department store and a major food store. As well, additional free-standing structures on adjoining land still owned by Jolin Holding.

IBM

IBM Canada Ltd. of Toronto, says it will continue to market its copier products despite a Federal Court of Canada ruling that IBM's Copier I infringed on five Xerox Corp. patents, three of which have expired. Previously, IBM Canada and its parent company, International Business Machines Corp. of Akmonk, N.J., said they would appeal the ruling. In a letter to customers, IBM Canada said that besides the appeal, a number of alternatives, including the company's right to obtain licences for the patents in question, are available so that IBM customers still may use company products.

Stelco

Steel Co. of Canada Ltd., Toronto, will raise prices on about half of its production by about seven per cent and Dominion Foundaries and Steel Ltd., Hamilton, will increase prices on most of its production by about six per cent. The new prices are effective between July 31 and Aug. 2. The companies said the increases are necessary to cover increased costs. A spokesman for Algoma Steel Corp. Ltd. of Sault Ste. Marie, Ont., said the company is reviewing the prices of its flat rolled steel products.

Bethlehem Copper

The largest single shareholder of Bethlehem Copper Corp. is negotiating to sell its 1.6 million shares. Bethlehem said in a news release that Granges Essem Ab of Sweden, whose shareholding in Bethlehem amounts to about 25 per cent, is dealing with a third party who was not identified. The negotiations come during a bid by Cominco Ltd. for all of Bethlehem's shares. Cominco's offer of $18 a share, which could cost $103 million, came June 28 and expires July 22 unless Cominco extends. Earlier this year Bethlehem advised shareholders that the stock was worth $23 to $25. Bethlehem's second-largest shareholder, Newmont Mining Corp., which owns 1.4 million shares or about 23 per cent, has said it will not tender its shares to Cominco. There has been speculation that Newmont is the part negotiating with Granges.

Gibraltar Mines

Gibraltar Mines Ltd. of Vancouver has reported six-month earnings of $1.3 million or 11 cents a share up from a loss of $364,000 or three cents a share in same period last year. Operations during the second quarter last year were affected by a 19-week strike at the mine. The company reported a loss of $987,000 or nine cents a share in the second quarter this year. A company spokesman said that continued high inventories held by smelters and metal exchanges have caused the price of copper to decline further during the second quarter. The spokesman also said the production of molybdenum has been resumed at the Gibraltar mine but would not have a significant effect on earnings.

GCOS

Great Canadian Sands Ltd. (GCOS) has reported a profit of $2,444,000, including an extraordinary gain of $315,000, for the first six months of 1977, down from a profit of $6,927,000, including an extraordinary gain of $2,545,000, for the same period last year. The lower earnings were caused by a loss of $3,841,000, in the second quarter. Kenneth Heddon, CGOS president, attributes the second-quarter loss to lower production caused by a scheduled maintenance shutdown during April and May. Synthetic oil production averaged 41,400 barrels a day, down 14 per cent from the first half of 1976.

Standard B.C.

Consolidated net earnings of Standard Broadcasting Corporation Ltd. for the nine months ended May 31, were $3.6 million, an increase of $444,700 (14.1 per cent) over the same period in 1976.

Earnings per share were 64 cents, compared with 56.1 cents in 1976.

Consolidated revenues for the nine months were $27.17 million compared with $23.43 million in the nine months to May 31, 1976.

Imasco

Imasco Ltd. expects "significant improvement" during fiscal year 1978, with preliminary first quarter sales figures showing a six-per-cent rise over the same period last year, company president Paul Pare reports.

Sales are up despite the sale by Imasco of Amco Services and Editel Inc., mainly because of a good showing by Imperial Tobacco and Imasco's food division, Pare told the annual shareholders meeting.

Although no final figures were available, Pare said Imperial Tobacco's cigarette sales increased for the first quarter and that sales and earnings of the food division are "well ahead of last year."

Retail operations of United Cigar Stores, Arlington-Collegiate Sports, Top Drug Mart and the Tinder Box in the United States all continued to expand, he said.

BOOK THIEF CAUGHT

VANCOUVER (CP) — A former University of British Columbia student was found guilty in provincial court Tuesday of stealing $4,000 in books from UBC libraries.

Judge Jack McGivern found that Brian Charles Dobson, 29, fooled the library's "tattle-tape" security system by removing magnetic tapes hidden in the book bindings.

Dobson was arrested last August and charged with theft over $200 after police searched his home and found 260 UBC books stolen during a three-year period.

An electronic scanner at the exit turnstiles of some UBC libraries can detect unchecked library books by picking up a charge on the magnetic tapes.

Judge McGivern ordered Dobson to make restitution to the university and adjourned the case until Aug. 15 for a pre-sentence report.

Triple Testing On 2,4-D

VANCOUVER (CP) — Three separate organizations are continuing to conduct tests on the effect of the herbicide 2,4-D to kill milfoil weed in the Okanagan Lakes.

Karl Marsden, provincial biologist, said Tuesday that test applications will be made over four acres in the north arm of Okanagan Lake to study the effects on plankton, insects and waterfowl.

Marsden said results from Skaha Lake near Penticton showed that there was no detectable amount of the herbicide in sediment and most of the 2,4-D has entered the weeds.

In another monitoring program, Dr. David Clarke, public health officer for the Okanagan area, said results from the water resources laboratory show no detectable levels of the chemical in four drinking water systems in Okanagan Lake.

The Environmental Coalition, a citizen organization, is also conducting tests, but representative Tina Kramer said the group is having difficulty getting samples tested because it requires special equipment.

Inn Would Buy Old Fire Hall

Victoria's land management committee recommended Tuesday that city council accept an offer to purchase the old Burnside fire hall property fronting on Douglas for $128,000.

The price was offered for the 11,600-q.-ft. property by the owners of the adjoining property, the Inntown Inn at 653 Dunedin.

The committee was told that the firm's plans involve the demolition of the fire hall, which was vacated by the city fire department in 1973.

An earlier offer from the Inntown Inn was rejected in 1974 because the council of that day opposed the demolition.

There were no takers when the city offered the property for sale two years ago for $179,000.

In other business Tuesday, the committee considered two proposals for the future use of the old Beacon Hill School building, and decided that neither was acceptable.

One was an offer from developer Gordon Vincent and Associates to buy the property for $61,500 and convert the building to residential suites while retaining the facade.

The other proposal from the James Bay Residents' League envisaged the city retaining ownership of the building but allowing community groups to use it for various activities.

Aldermen apparently weren't enthusiastic about either prospect.

Some said the developer had failed to come up with a realistic offer. Ald. Bob Wright asked what the property would be worth if the building was removed, and land commissioner Ken Wilkins estimated the value would be around $100,000.

The JBRL proposal included a commitment that the user community groups would be responsible for the renovation and upkeep of the structure, but that assurance didn't satisfy Wright.

"There is nothing to stop that league going out of business six months from now," he commented, in which case the city would probably be saddled with the responsibility of upkeep.

Ald. John Hayes noted that $300,000 in public funds has already been spent on the James Bay New Horizons centre, and a further $400,000 is earmarked for the James Bay community school.

He wondered whether "we have reached the limit" in providing community facilities for James Bay residents.

When Ald. Bill Tindall asked if the school building was worth preserving, Wright informed him that council's Heritage Advisory Committee considers it to have no heritage value.

"I certainly don't have a philosophy that that school must be saved at all costs," added Wright.

The matter of the school's future was left in abeyance, with aldermen indicating a willingness to wait and see if any more acceptable proposals are forthcoming.

Scotland Yard Records Used Against Kennedy

VANCOUVER (CP) — RCMP say criminal and fingerprint records supplied by New Scotland Yard police in London convinced them that Irishman Jim Kennedy is James Joseph McCann, wanted in Europe on terrorist charges.

That information was disclosed Tuesday when testimony from a special immigration department deportation hearing was released.

The 200-pages of testimony, filed in the Federal Court of Canada July 6, also revealed that:

—Kennedy said associates and friends of the late United States president John F. Kennedy, and late Chinese leader Mto Tse Tung, can vouch that he is Kennedy and not McCann.

—Kennedy said records from London are fabricated by British and the Northern Ireland special branch.

—He said he has used several aliases.

—He said he is not legally married to his wife Sylvia.

—Vancouver police used a shaving mirror to obtain Kennedy's fingerprints which match those from London.

RCMP Sgt. William Igenthorp said Kennedy-McCann has used several aliases, including John James McKenna, John Carrington Fernandez and James Joseph Jones, but Kennedy says he has used none of them.

He said he has used the name Peter Josephs and that people in Belfast, Ireland might know him as John or Shamus or Padrick.

During the inquiry, Kennedy gave conflicting evidence as to whether he has been involved in acts of violence.

Sgt. Igenthorp filed an exhibit, saying that James Joseph McCann was arrested in 1971 in Belfast and charged with 13 serious offences including arson, possession of explosives and a loaded firearm and burglary.

The evidence said: "He is also charged with throwing a petrol bomb and for the possession of a loaded sawed-off shotgun. During the morning of June 15, 1971, whilst awaiting trial, McCann escaped custody by sawing through bars of his cell window and climbing down a rope of torn bedding."

Prospectors To Gain —Chabot

Prospectors will benefit under new legislation affecting mineral claims introduced Tuesday in the legislature, says Mines Minister Jim Chabot.

Chabot said the new Mineral Act is basically an updating of the old one, which he said contained ambiguities and some repressive clauses concerning prospectors.

The minister told reporters the act will abolish a provision introduced by the former New Democratic Party government which required prospectors to pay a $10 rental fee for each claim they staked.

Chabot said many prospectors were unaware of this and therefore "tens of thousands of claims" were forfeited.

NDP mines critic Graham Lea (NDP — Prince Rupert) declined to comment on the legislation, saying he will study it in detail before making any statement.

Chabot said the act also contains provisions for prospectors to use a "two-post" method for staking claims, a move which he called a concession to prospectors. The section prohibits companies from using this easier claiming method.

Chabot explained that the act removes rental from mineral claims which is replaced by a fee to record work.

"When implemented, this will eliminate any question of forfeiture of mineral claims where work is recorded in advance, if rental is not paid," he said.

Australians Draw

NORTHAMPTON, England (Reuter) — Northamptonshire and Australia fought to a draw in their three-day cricket match Tuesday when the home team was 115 for one in its second innings at the close. Scores: Australians 328 for 6 declared and 238 for 4 declared; Northamptonshire 236 and 115 for 1.

'Always Had' Core Curriculum

The Social Credit government's core curriculum proposal is nothing more than a public relations job designed for political gain, Eileen Dailly (NDP—Burnaby North) said Tuesday.

Dailly, the former education minister, told the legislature that no new core curriculum is planned for B.C. schools as Education Minister Pat McGeer would have the public believe.

She said she did not object to that per se, because many education programs were instituted by the NDP.

Dailly said McGeer has stirred up a small but vocal anti-education fringe and has done so at the expense of the whole education system.

DAILLY

"There's no new core curriculum . . . we've always had one," she said. "I don't think the minister has levelled with the people of B.C."

Dennis Cocke (NDP—New Westminster), his party's education critic, backed Dailly, saying the core proposals were nothing more than a circus.

Cocke said a recent ministry of education news release said core curriculum proposals would be in place in the B.C. school system this fall.

He said that such a decision would have had to be made in February or March and "there can be no changes at this late date."

Dailly said McGeer has done nothing to deal with the problems which do exist and he has only stirred up anti-teacher sentiment.

She said that a good example was the controversy over competency in English.

She said McGeer has catered to the anti-education mood of a minority of the province for his own political edification.

No concrete programs have been started to help alleviate the problem and teachers have been unnecessarily blamed for the problem, she said.

In the meantime, McGeer's remarks have created fear in the ranks of the students.

Dailly said it appears that if McGeer had his way, the province would revert to the old days of students sitting in a row, being arbitrarily passed and failed.

McGeer did not respond to the criticisms, which were made during debate on his budget estimates.

Occupational Skills 'First Priority'

Programs to provide students with marketable skills to reduce unemployment will get first priority, Education Minister Pat McGeer told the legislature Tuesday.

"Forty per cent of the unemployed are under the age of 25 — an age just when ambition peaks, enthusiasm abounds and when modern skills should make individuals most saleable on the job market," the minister said in launching debate on budget estimates of $948 million for his ministry.

"Too many of our graduates have no marketable skills," he said, and the result is an increase in the crime rate, vandalism and drug abuse, as the young "spill out their frustration at being unable to find employment."

He said 40,000 students enter the B.C. work force each year.

"Those that leave the educational system with occupational skills have little difficulty in getting work. The other have an extremely hard time."

Eye Specialist Uses Computers Prescribing Lenses

Right Out of Space And Lightning Fast

By AB KENT
Times Staff

A Victoria ophthalmologist is using computers to prescribe corrective lenses in little more than the blink of an eye.

Three machines employing optics, light, laser beam and computer logic together are shaving at least an hour off the time it normally takes to test subjective refraction, field of vision and lenses.

The device is a $25,000 Auto-Refractor, a machine that evolved from the U.S. space program.

Apart from the one here, about five others have been put into use in other parts of the province, including Duncan, Nanaimo, Vancouver, New Westminster and Kelowna.

The origin of the Auto-Refractor, made in Virginia by Acuity Systems, Inc., was a stabilizing device developed for the U.S. National Aeronautics and Space Administration to correct tumbling of satellites in space orbit.

Scientists rigged a telescope in a satellite and trained it on Vega, one of the brightest stars in the sky, so that its image would be reflected on a battery of light-sensitive cells linked to a computer circuit.

The slightest shift in position relative to Vega was then reported through the computer which in turn instructed the satellite's guidance jets to take corrective action.

The system cost $6 million to develop and proved so successful at calculating deviation that other practical applications were developed, including a speedy, accurate means of measuring refraction in the human eye.

In its ophthalmic application the system uses an infra red light beam — invisible to the patient being tested — which reflects from the retina, the layer of light-sensitive tissue at the back of the eye.

This light oscillates and rotates at a rate of 700 cycles per second to give the computer several readings averaged into a single digital readout or evaluation of each eye. The beam is focussed through a small telescope, just as in the satellite.

Conventionally, this type of sight testing requires 20-30 minutes. The Auto-Refractor does it in five.

Essentially the machine tests the lens power of each eyeball, but it does not discover organic faults as such. If there is something the matter with a lens it will not produce the right numbers at the back of the machine.

"The machine never gets tired or frustrated," one doctor said. "It goes on producing evidence, even when it's nonsense, so then we can tell there's something else wrong with the eye — like cataracts."

Acuity Systems, who now ask closer to $28,000 for the device, consider it so delicate an instrument that they shipped the first one here in company with a technician who made the installation and remained until he was satisfied the machine worked properly. Subsequent servicing has been by a Seattle-based technician.

Acuity Systems is particular about whether a practice warrants such a machine. A one-man office, lacking volume, would not qualify because the unit requires fairly steady use to be efficient.

The second machine, if anything is more automated than the first. The Auto-Lensmeter does virtually the same thing as its big brother for just under a quarter of the cost, but it diagnoses spectacle lenses, not the human eye.

A laser beam oscillates and rotates through the lens of a pair of glasses to give a refractory reading within two seconds. Lens power appears as a digital display on a small screen, saving the doctor, or technician a lot of manipulating with optical equipment, with less chance of error.

The third instrument in the stable of computerized electronics is the $6,000 Auto-Field, made by Gulton Bio-tronics, of California.

This unit, like a prop from 2001: A Space Odyssey, replaces an hour's work with a flashlight, ophthalmologists say. It takes about three minutes to test field of vision and will indicate such trouble as glaucoma.

In operation, a patient focusses one eye at a time on a small red cross appearing through a lens in the centre of a vertical, bowl-shaped screen about two feet in diameter.

In what appears as a random arrangement is a series of pinholes in the bowl, through which tiny lights appear in sequence. Each time a light goes on and is reflected from the patient's retina, a switch closes circuit to make a mark on a paper chart representing the areas of sensitivity for that eye.

If there is a blind patch or restricted peripheral vision, the machine-made chart will show it by a blank spot.

"You get an appreciation of a patient's general vision," say doctors. "He may have 20-20 vision, but it may be tunnel vision.

"And the beauty of it is, if the patient tires and closes his eyes, the machine goes to sleep. The moment he opens his eyes it goes on again."

You Win—But You Lose

A deputy in the attorney-general's department said today he agrees six law students working for the summer as deputy sheriffs should be paid the going rate — but the money isn't available.

So the six are being laid off at the end of the month rather than working to September after their union launched a grievance seeking equal pay for equal work.

Dennis Sheppard, associate deputy attorney-general, said the early layoffs didn't come because a union launched a grievance. He considers it a fair claim but there is simply not enough money to meet it.

Sheppard also said the wrong letter was sent to the six advising them they would be laid off. The letter said they were being cut because of a decrease in operational requirements.

"That isn't quite right," he said.

Whoever drafted the letter for him to sign probably had in mind that only provincial courts sit during the summer. But the main reason for the layoffs is there is no money to pay the students full deputy sheriff's salaries, even though they are doing the work.

The students are Angela Bartram and Phil Mahr from the University of Victoria's law school and Donald Skogstad, Rob Bales, Phil Pelzman and Nadine Marzocco from the law school at UBC.

When hired in May they were told they would be paid $970 a month. Regular deputy sheriffs get $1,172 and a grievance arguing equal pay for equal work was filed July 7 by the B.C. Government Employees Union.

Within a few days five of the students got letters from Sheppard which said they were being laid off "due to a decrease in our operational requirements . . ."

The sixth, Marzocco, will work to Aug. 15 to complete a report for Sheppard.

Sheppard said the students were hired with limited grant money from the provincial labor department. As it is, he is faced with finding about $5,400 to pay them retroactively and for this month at the full deputy sheriff's rate and he has no money budgeted for this.

Developers' Race Urged for Centre

By DEREK SIDENIUS
Times Staff

The decision on whether a regional shopping centre is built at Broadmead or Tillicum should be settled by a race between developers to sign up tenants, Saanich aldermen were told Tuesday.

Jim Kelley, president of Columbia Commonwealth Ltd., said at a lands, planning and housing committee meeting he feels so strongly the Tillicum site should get the nod that he'd stake everything on the outcome of the competition.

He suggested council designate both sites for the regional shopping centre. The first developer to lease 350,000 square feet would be declared the winner and awarded the building permit. The loser would be limited to building a smaller community shopping centre.

Kelley said he is confident the Tillicum site would prove more acceptable to investors and the business community.

His challenge, which failed to spark any reaction from committee members, came at the end of an hour-long "hard sell" presentation made by his company for the Tillicum site.

The presentation came a day after The Bay and Broadmead Farms Ltd. had approached council over the regional shopping centre in the Broadmead-Royal Oak area. Mayor Ed Lum said last week only one of the proposed centres will get the go-ahead, and he favors Broadmead.

As in the case of Broadmead, ratepayers in the Tillicum area appeared before the committee and presented a petition opposing the development on the grounds insufficient information about the project had been made available to them.

They cited traffic problems, a possible adverse effect on birds and wildlife and the impact on existing stores in the area as factors against the Tillicum project.

Kelley orchestrated a review of the project calling on a bevy of consultants, some of whom he had flown in from Toronto with him, to discuss the major issues.

Economist Herman Kircher said a major shopping centre is warranted in Victoria and that since 1973 market surveys have shown the Tillicum-Burnside location as best.

(A market survey commissioned by Broadmead came to the same conclusion about the Broadmead site).

Kircher said there is "more than adequate market potential" to support a regional shopping centre but agreed it would have a devastating effect on the small existing centres on Burnside and Gorge Road.

"There will be hardships. No question. But the market is more than adequate to justify this type of centre."

He said market predictions indicate persons in Greater Victoria will spend $40 million more in department stores in 1981 than in 1976.

If Tillicum went ahead it would generate retail department sales of about $25 million, he said.

Landscape architect Don Vaughan argued a major shopping centre would enhance the ecology of the 31-acre site because the company intends to build holding tanks to control drainage and spend up to $413,000 improving the Colquitz Creek waterway system as it passes through the property.

The site, home of the Tillicum Drive-In Theatre, is "totally mutilated and bankrupt as it is now," Vaughan said.

Committee members voted only to receive and file the three-quarter-inch-thick brief prepared by the company.

Committee chairman Fred Severson told Kelley the Capital Region Board has recommended that if a regional shopping centre is built in Saanich it should be at Broadmead.

Ald. Ian Cass, answering charges council has held secret meetings with developers about the shopping centre, said that up to now the municipality hasn't received a formal application for either development.

"If that's the case," Kelley retorted, "I hope you will consider this presentation a formal application."

He was told he'd have to complete a proper application form.

"That will be done," he said, ". . . forthwith."

They're Sidney's Disciples Of Billy Graham of Dentistry

Dental disease is so common that, alas, we have all come to accept it along with a touch of senility and those greying hairs at the temples.

Everyone has cavities. And one day, even if in the distant future, we'll all lose our teeth and have to wear false ones. Right?

Wrong!

People should stop looking upon their dentist as a repairman to whom they go only when they have a problem to fix; and they should realize that if they look after their own teeth more, there's no reason why they should ever lose them. So says Dr. Dino Paulos.

Dr. Paulos?

Well, you see, I was intrigued by this advertisement in the Times recently: Dr. Dino Paulos wishes to announce the opening of his preventive dental practice in Sidney. So I thought I'd pop out and have a chat with Dr. Dino and see what it was all about.

Dino Paulos is another of your relatively new Canadians. He was born in Greece and came here as a teen-ager. Now 31, he is in his fourth year in dentistry after graduating from the University of Manitoba in Winnipeg along with his partner here,

Dr. Murray Kosick. But I won't waste any more of your time with incidentals.

What is important is that Paulos and Kosick are part of a new breed of dentist pushing the message that prevention is the best means of cure.

"It's a new philosophy popular with young graduates today, as well as with many older dentists, of keeping a tooth rather than extracting it," explains Dr. Paulos.

"We're disciples really of American William Barclay, the Billy Graham of dentistry. He's completely dogmatic, has a very strict program and claims he hasn't pulled a tooth since 1961!"

Paulos and Kosick are just as serious about the mouths they look into.

"Pulling a tooth is something we don't like to do here, either," Paulos says, "not unless it's completely beyond repair and there's no other alternative."

Oh, Paulos and Kosick cover all aspects of dentistry, all right. If people go there with very bad tooth decay, they'll do extractions. If people go there with no teeth, they'll fit false jobs. It's just that the emphasis is on prevention.

"When new patients come in, we spend about an hour or an hour and a-half with them, taking a panoramic film, tracing the particular disease and explaining the process of it with the help of a book we have," says Dr. Paulos. "And we show them how to brush properly and how to use dental floss, the secret of defeating tooth decay."

"It's a style, okay; it's not a speciality, it's a style," explains Paulos. "Preventive dentistry in its all encompassing sense is the prevention and control of oral disease. We know that 85 per cent of all the teeth lost today are due to periodontal disease (gum disease) and dental caries (cavities) which themselves are caused by dental plaque, a film that unfortunately is the same color as your teeth and consists of bacteria and carbohydrates.

"Since we do know the cause, then it's just a matter of controlling it. If in some way we can educate the public to become participants in their oral health by removing this cause, then there's no reason why they can't hold on to their teeth for life."

This education includes the proper use of brushing and flossing, a good diet without too many in-between-meal snacks and candies which are a killer, and fluoridation of city water supplies, which in itself, says Dr. Paulos, cuts your dental bills by 50 per cent.

It all sounds so basic and simple that you wonder what the stumbling block can be. But there is one: the people themselves.

"People have many misconceptions about their teeth," explains the dentist. "Because dental disease is so common and affects everyone, people become nonchalant about it. And it becomes hard to convince them that it isn't necessary to lose their teeth."

PAULOS

So many have already lost the battle without putting up much of a fight. There are, says Dr. Paulos, 35 million people in the United States without teeth.

It's sad, he says, because it's so much to lose.

"There's nothing that we have that can replace our own teeth. And they are so much better. Your looks, your smile, the function, eating . . . it's worth fighting for to keep."

Dino Paulos flashes that mouthful of white in an ear-to-ear grin.

"I'm sure your natural dentition is better than clickers!"

Rio's New Subway Is Leaving Path of Fury, Destruction

By MARY LENZ

RIO DE JANEIRO (AP) — Rio de Janeiro's subway is a billion-dollar transportation aid that sometimes seems a billion-dollar disaster.

Its path is marked by mud, broken window panes, cracked walls and furious apartment dwellers who complain cement mixers, pile drivers and heavy machinery have made it impossible to sleep.

Officials estimate the subway will cost $1.1 billion by the time it is finished, it is hoped, in 1979. But some say nobody really knows the eventual figure.

"Human and material costs are absurdly higher than predicted," grumbled the Jornal do Brasil in an editorial. "Nobody knows how much it has cost and will cost."

Irritations have been so extensive that some people have retaliated by throwing tomatoes, rotten eggs and bottles from their apartment windows at the construction workers below. The unfortunate operator of one cement mixer missed three days of work when he was struck on the head by a cassava, one of Brazil's most popular vegetable products.

Technically, Rio is subject to a "law of silence" effective between 10 p.m. and 6 a.m. But it is not uncommon to see heavy machinery rolling up and down a subway construction area at 4 a.m.

The subway's progress has been accompanied by cracking walls, ruptured sewage lines and frequent interruptions of water, gas, electric and telephone service as lines are accidentally cut.

Rio residents complain life in formerly pleasant, tree-shaded neighborhoods has been disrupted, or that front entrances to their apartment buildings have been blocked off. As the work progresses, they say they can no longer find places to park.

Neighbors in one area said they were severely inconvenienced when all four local supermarkets closed down. As streets are dug up and traffic to the area cut off, many stores have become stranded, losing business because customers find it too inconvenient to get to them.

The Alencar Glass Shop in Catete, however, reported a brisk increase in business when subway construction began to approach. In one two-week period it replaced 1,000 panes of glass in nearby windows.

Horses Outrun Post Office

MORRIS, Man. (CP) — Thirteen pony express riders proved Tuesday that, under certain conditions, old-fashioned ways of delivering the mail can be faster than the new.

Tony Sawatski of Greenland, Man., rode into this southern Manitoba community shortly after midnight Tuesday night and presented Mayor Jack Murray with this week's edition of eight Manitoba community newspapers.

Accompanying him for the last mile of after-dark riding were the other 12 relay riders, who had relieved one another in five-mile laps throughout the day.

"If you want a letter from Melita, get a horse," Murray said with a grin after accepting the mail-bag.

Neil Penner of Morden had begun the run from Melita, Man., 200 miles to the west of this community, almost 16 hours earlier.

Earlier Tuesday night, cyclist Peter Baynton of Winnipeg completed a bicycle express trip over identical terrain and handed Postmaster-General Jean-Jacques Blais a sweat-stained mailbag.

Baynton and eight other cyclists had been recruited after the Manitoba Community Newspapers Association (MCNA) challenged the post office to deliver mail faster than its pony express on the Melita-to-Morris trip.

Accepting the mailbags, Blais noted the complaints by community newspapers of slow service that had prompted their challenge last February.

"They had a beef," he said. "They challenged me to a race. They now are convinced that we have a service that is satisfactory.

"In any case," he added, "it was great fun for a summer day."

Blais was to present his newspapers today to Chuck Maclean, president of the Canadian Community Newspapers Association, whose annual convention gets underway in Winnipeg Thursday.

The cyclists covered the distance in 11 hours and 16 minutes without serious problems.

However, the MCNA and the participating horsemen insist their race was with the regular mail run and not with the speedier cyclists.

"We definitely won the race as far as we're concerned," said pony express co-ordinator Doug Penner, editor of the Valley Leader of Carman. "The bikes didn't enter into it."

"Everyone is a winner," concluded Miles Phillips of the Boissevain Recorder, one of the originators of the pony express idea.

"The MCNA gets publicity, the post office improves its service, customers get their papers faster, more people subscribe and everyone is better off."

Other community newspapers followed different mail routes, but all converged in Winnipeg shortly after 2 a.m. today for the final 33 miles south by regular mail truck to Morris.

Train-Truck Collision, Peat Moss Flies

EDMONTON (CP) — An Railways freight train smashed into a semi-trailer truck here Tuesday, dumping peat moss all over the neighborhood.

An RCMP constable said the female driver, who escaped injury, apparently followed another vehicle across a level crossing although signal lights were operating.

A CN employee working within a few feet of the accident said it was fortunate the truck carried peat moss.

"If it was gravel or sand, the train could have been derailed and the train crew killed or injured."

VISITORS SENTENCED

EDMONTON (CP) — A retired couple from Port Perry, Ont., was arrested Tuesday on suspicion of needing some Klondike Days hospitality.

The arresting officer turned the offenders, Cy and Helen Watson, to the South Edmonton Jaycees, who sentenced them to three days at a downtown hotel.

The Jaycees even employed a real RCMP officer to make the arrest. With sirens blasting and red lights whirling, the officer stopped the unsuspecting visitors.

It was the licence plates that tipped the officer that the offenders were from another province.

Also included in the sentence were tickets to all the major Klondike Days events starting today.

"We were just coming out of the visitor's bureau when they stopped me," said Mrs. Watson. "I couldn't figure out why they were coming after me."

The Watsons are travelling through Edmonton as part of a 10-month tour of North America in their 29-foot trailer. They were here once before — 15 years ago on a tenting trip.

This time, the stay "should be more comfortable," Mrs. Watson smiled.

Another out-of-province couple will be picked up Friday.

Edmonton Union Sues CBC, Grit

EDMONTON (CP) — The Edmonton-based Plumbers and Pipefitters Union, Local 488, has filed a lawsuit against the CBC and three participants of a program concerning a pipeline from Edmonton to Fort McMurray in northeastern Alberta.

Named as defendants in the action, filed in Alberta Supreme Court here Monday, are the CBC, Adrienne Clarkson who is co-host of the program the Fifth Estate, Alberta Liberal leader Nick Taylor, and Arthur Henuset, partner in Henuset Brothers Ltd., a Calgary-based pipeline construction firm.

The action says that the defendants made remarks that were malicious and damaging to the local in a Feb. 8 program, which dealt with events leading up to the awarding of a pipeline contract to three firms.

Alberta Energy Co. Ltd., awarded the contract, worth about $22 million, to the three union firms, although Henuset Brothers, a non-union firm, submitted a lower bid of about $17 million.

Skier Inquiry Set

BANFF, Alta. (CP) — A public inquiry into the death of skier Shirley Oliver, 31, of Cranbrook, will be held here Aug. 5, it was announced Tuesday.

Oliver died March 27 when an avalanche crashed down on her and five companions after they entered a slide area while skiing in the Citadel Pass area near Lake Louise.

Carnival Safety

CUMBERLAND HOUSE, Sask. (CP) — Coroner's jury has recommended that provincial legislation governing safety standards for midway and carnival rides be introduced.

The recommendation came at the end of an inquest Monday into the death of Leon Chaboyer, 14, killed last month when a ferris-wheel seat broke off and fell to the ground.

Chaboyer was on the ground, watching.

Dentist Shortage

REGINA (CP) — The capital city of Saskatchewan is facing a growing shortage of dentists.

The city is "not adequately served" by dentists, says Dr. J. W. Niedermayer, president of the College of Dental Surgeons of Saskatchewan.

He said there are only 45 dentists and four specialists serving the 150,000 residents of Regina.

Rapeseed Progress

SASKATOON (CP) — A $1-million program underway at the Agriculture Canada research station here will assist the development of new varieties of rapeseed and other crops, Dr. Ross Greenshields, station director, said Tuesday.

He said the funds, provided by the federal government, will be for the construction of a growth building to house growth chambers, which are used for crop breeding.

Arbitrator Named

EDMONTON (CP) — Labor Minister Neil Crawford announced Tuesday the appointment of Mr. Justice Donald Bowen of the Alberta Supreme Clurt as the arbitrator to settle the contract dispute between 6,000 nurses and the Alberta Hospital Association.

Ottawa Seeks Port Chaos Order

OTTAWA (CP) — A government bill, designed to overhaul the country's chaotic ports system, was introduced in the Commons Tuesday.

The new bill would place the 20 major ports under a single authority and give local harbor commissions wide autonomy.

Canadian ports now are governed by a variety of government departments and agencies and local harbor commissions. The bill would replace several acts now applying to these ports.

The bill steers a middle course between the centralized authority given the National Harbors Board (NHB) and broad freedom given local harbor commissions under several harbor commissions acts.

The legislation follows closely the ports policy announced by Transport Minister Otto Lang last summer.

The bill would create local ports commissions at 20 ports.

These ports include St. John's, Nfld.; Halifax; Saint John, N.B.; Quebec, Montreal, Trois-Rivieres, Chicoutimi-Baie des Ha! Ha! and Sept-Iles, Que.

Others are Toronto, Hamilton, Oshawa, Windsor and Thunder Bay, Ont.; Churchill, Man.; and Nanaimo, Port Alberni, Prince Rupert, Vancouver, Fraser River and North Fraser, B.C.

Pierre Franche, NHB chairman, has been named commissioner-designate of the Canadian ports commission which will be an arm of the transport department.

The commission will oversee operations of the local harbor commissions and 300 public harbors and 500 government wharves. The public harbors and wharves will be administered directly by regional organizations.

The ports commission will be responsible for general planning, development and direction of all ports.

Local port commissions will be allowed to regulate and control use and development of all land and property within port limits. They will be permitted to buy, sell and lease land and vessels.

However, the transport minister must be consulted for any lease less than 20 years unless he turns this power over directly to the commission. Cabinet approval must be sought for leases of more than 20 years.

Ouellet Dodging Issue, Opposition Claiming

OUELLET
. . . under fire

OTTAWA (CP) — Progressive Conservatives accused Urban Affairs Minister Andre Ouellet Tuesday of evading the Commons and giving misleading answers on the controversial York Place low-rent project in Hamilton, Ont.

Conservative House Leader Walter Baker (Grenville-Carleton) said Ouellet should be forced to appear in the House to reply to Conservative queries.

He said in the Commons that the Conservatives informed Ouellet's office Monday that they would be raising the York Place issue in the daily House question period.

The minister's aides had assured him Ouellet would appear both Monday and Tuesday but the minister was not in the Commons, Baker said. The Conservative MP said he knew Ouellet was in Ottawa.

Commons Speaker James Jerome ruled that there was no question of privilege involved.

Baker had earlier charged that the urban affairs minister gave misleading and incomplete answers in a written reply to questions by Conservative housing critic James McGrath (St. John's East).

The uproar came after Ouellet's parliamentary secretary, Jean-Robert Gauthier, MP for Ottawa Vanier, said Central Mortgage and Housing Corp. (CMHC) is not obliged to see that taxpayers' money lent for housing projects is spent on those developments.

Gauthier said it would be "virtually impossible" for the Crown corporation to keep track of how these loans are spent.

Baker said outside the Commons that "if that's the philosophy of CMHC, their philosphy is a fraud on the public."

Gauthier was being questioned about a Ouellet statement indicating that CMHC is not satisfied all the funds granted for the York Place development were actually spent on the project.

York Place is in receivership and the project developer and a CMHC housing inspector have been convicted of bribery charges.

There have been allegations of political interference in the case and Labor Minister John Muro has filed a libel suit against a Hamilton newspaper on the issue.

Baker said in the House that Ouellet has wrongly stated that no CMHC officials have been convicted as a result of the York Place case.

Baker and Conservative MP Dean Whiteway (Selkirk) repeated demands for a judicial inquiry into the York Place case.

Cabinet Turns Attention to Woes of Small Business

OTTAWA (CP) — The federal cabinet is expected to consider in the near future, perhaps next week, a series of proposals aimed at improving conditions for small businessmen.

Len Marchand, the minister of state responsible for this field, told reporters Tuesday after a meeting with representatives of the Canadian Chamber of Commerce that his original deadline for his cabinet presentation was the end of June, but a survey of businessmen, other government departments and provincial administrations took more time than he expected.

"But I'm going to be going really very soon to cabinet."

His proposals, however, will not be in the form of legislation.

Instead, it is to be a working discussion paper, which is essentially Marchand's job.

"Not direct legislation," he replied, when asked whether this was a possibility. "It depends on what cabinet will reccommend to me."

On the other hand, he pointed out, he already has committed the government to legislation that do away with the mountains of paperwork that take up so much time, making it impractical and often uneconomical for small businesses to operate.

This particular proposal, an amendment the Corporations and Labor Unions Return Act, should lighten the load on about 70,000 small businesses, many of them one-and-two-person firms.

Suffice to say, he added, that the thrust of his program is to put small business on a competitive footing with large business.

Marchand, who has been in the portfolio for less than a year, said he responded "very positively" to the chamber of commerce's paper, which was submitted by Sam Hughes, the chamber's executive director.

Hughes, as well as Marchand, was optimistic about the future, saying that although nothing concrete was expected right away, "he was very much in sympathy with many of the thoughts that were put forward by the chamber."

A national federation of more than 625 community organizations, 70 per cent of which are located in towns with fewer than 5,000 population, the chamber said in its brief that it is acutely aware of the problems facing small business.

"Many owners and managers of Canada's smaller firms feel very strongly about the size of government, its cost, the demands it places on them in terms of reporting, and the efficiency and quality of services it furnishes to them," the chamber said in the brief.

"Few appear satisfied with things as they are and their frustration is compounded by the knowledge that they neither possess the data, time, or resources to fully document their case, nor the influence to ensure that their concerns . . . will receive attention."

Hughes said the paperwork burden is one of their complaints, uncertain taxation administration is another, and the seeming stranglehold that large business has on government contracts is yet another.

He said changing any of these will not require major legislative changes.

The amount of effort required on the part of the government certainly would be miniscule in comparison to the way small businesses, their employees and their customers would benefit.

When it was observed that these complaints have been around for a number of years, Hughes said he is more optimistic than he has been in the past, because the government now has a minister specifically responsible for small business.

Payment To PCs Mixup, Says PWA

EDMONTON (CP) — Rod McDaniel, Pacific Western Airlines chairman, said Tuesday an $810 donation to the federal Progressive Conservative party last year must have been an administrative mix-up.

Records in Ottawa show the Alberta-government owned airline contributed only to the Tory party in 1976, after the airline had been taken over the Progressive Conservative-dominated province.

But Grant Notley, New Democratic Party leader, termed the gift "a sleazy conduct of public affairs" and called for a full investigation in the legislature.

Information on the PWA donation was submitted to chief electoral officer J. M. Hamel under federal law which states that the names of persons or corporations contributing more than $100 to a political party must be made public.

"It's against our corporate policy to make any political donations," said McDaniel in a telephone interview from his Calgary office.

He said that prior to the takeover by the Alberta government, it had been policy to donate to political parties.

"After the takeover, it was brought up at a meeting and it was decided as a firm policy not to make any political contributions.

'A Minority Clinging To Its Privileges'

QUEBEC (CP) — Quebec's English-speaking community is a minority attempting to hold on to its privileges, Camille Laurin, cultural development minister, told the national assembly Tuesday.

Speaking during debate on the government's language legislation, Laurin said this minority still looked on the Parti Quebecois government as a stranger.

Instead of trying to understand the PQ, "as well as the Quebec people it represents," Laurin said the English-speaking community "gets its back up, denounces, refuses, fights and seeks confrontation."

"Its leaders are critical on every point. They support freedom of choice for parents (in language of education) and immigrants while they defend a status quo which is extremely profitable."

Laurin was lead-off speaker for the government as debate began on second reading—approval in principle—of Bill 101, the government's language legislation.

Debate began after Jean-Guy Cardinal, deputy assembly speaker, ruled as inadmissible a motion, presented by the Liberals, which charged Laurin and PQ House Leader Robert Burns with anti-democratic behavior in introducing Bill 101, a revised version of Bill 1.

In his speech to the assembly, Laurin, repeated his historical analysis of French Canada's struggle for survival in the midst of an English-speaking sea.

He said that the government's language policy must be seen in the context of Quebecers love for their country —Quebec—and rejection of the Canadian dream.

Laurin said that returning to freedom of choice in the language of education would be "masochistic and suicidal for the French-speaking majority" because immigrants have tended to integrate into the English-speaking community.

Likewise, he defended provisions of the law which would force English-speaking newcomers from other provinces to send their children to French schools.

He said the government recognized the right of English-speaking Quebecers to send their children to English-language schools.

Laurin concluded that if English-speaking Quebecers do not leave the province and keep up a reasonable birth rate, they can increase their school population.

Opposition leader Gerard Levesque told the national assembly Tuesday that the PQ is acting as if the province already has separated from Canada.

The PQ government's Bill 101 treats children from other provinces as if they were immigrants, the Liberal leader said.

He said the law was unnecessary because French already is the official language of Quebec.

The Opposition leader noted the Official Language Act passed by the province's Liberal government in 1974 made French Quebec's official language.

Home Prices Slumping in English Areas

MONTREAL (UPI) — The value of single-dwelling homes in predominantly French areas of Montreal Island rose in the second quarter of 1977 from a year ago but home prices in mainly English-speaking districts fell sharply, the Montreal Real Estate Board said Tuesday.

The board said the steepest declines were recorded on the Lakeshore area, where prices fell 11.3 per cent from an average $47,858 to $42,418 and in such west end districts as Montreal West, Westmount, Town of Mount Royal and Cote St. Luc where prices declined 12.4 per cent from an average $78,161 to $68,496.

In the same period, home prices in mainly French-speaking eastern parts of the city rose 19.4 per cent, from $35,646 to $42,547, while lesser increases were recorded for Laval and North Shore and South Shore parts of the island.

MREB president John Sullivan said homeowners in English-speaking sectors of the city now were asking lower prices than a year ago with demand strong for homes priced under $50,000.

"At the moment there are bargains to be had and in many cases the houses are selling at prices below what it would cost to build them today," Sullivan said.

Furore Swells Over Poll

MONTREAL (CP) — A controversy has arisen over results of a poll indicating the majority of voters in a nearby riding would support Quebec independence coupled with economic association with the rest of Canada.

McGill University sociologist Richard Hamilton, who has helped conduct several recent polls on the independence issue, said Tuesday the results were compromised by an ambiguous question on independence. He also said the sample was not varied enough to reflect Quebec public opinion.

Hamilton said Le Devoir, which published the results earlier this week, gave a misleading interpretation of the poll, conducted by Page, Roy et Associes in the provincial riding of St. Jean, about 40 miles south of here.

Publisher Claude Ryan defended Le Devoir's actions, saying the study had been deemed worthy of publication by a four-man editorial committee.

Jacques Roy, a statistics professor who conducted the study with his colleague Michel Page, confirmed reports that Le Devoir had paid only $150 for the poll.

He said their firm, formed last January, had spent about $1,000 on the poll and had been willing to absorb the loss in order to gain public exposure.

Ryan described the payment as a contribution designed to help them get their fledgling company off the ground.

Hamilton's criticism centred on a question in the poll which asked: "Supposing an independent Quebec could have economic links with the rest of Canada. Then, in a referendum, would you vote for or against the option of a sovereign Quebec associated economically with Canada?"

He said many of the 635 respondents may have mistakenly assumed that they were being asked what they would favor if Quebec was already independent.

This is roughly like asking: "If you were in hell would you like an air conditioner?" the sociologist said. "That bypasses the main question of whether you would like to be there or not."

Although the statistical methods used were sound, this error threw the study into question, he said.

Roy said telephone interviewers "had no problems" in explaining the question's meaning to respondents.

The poll said 47.9 per cent of respondents favored the independence-association formula while 30.7 were against.

If undecided respondents followed normal patterns, a 60-per-cent majority would vote in favor of the formula in the referendum, Page and Roy concluded.

Small Oregon Bus Line Wins Long Battle Against Greyhound

By JOHN F. BERRY
Washington Post

If ever there was an example of America's vaunted free enterpsire system it is William J. Niskanen.

The son of Finnish immigrats to Oregon, Bill Niskanen, in the 1920, tried his hand at logging, commercial fishing, farming and boxing at barroom smokers before struggling through business school while holding down two jobs. He became an auditor, and one of his first clients was a tiny bus line called Mt. Hood Stages in Bend, Ore. He liked the bus business so much that in 1931 he brought a one-third interest in the line (he would later buy out his two partners).

The three partners drove and maintained the buses, which serviced the little towns across Oregon's rugged countryside, while back in Bend their wives did the paperwork. During the depresssion, Mt. Hood grew by acquiring rights to routes abandoned as unprofitable by Greyhound Bus Lines, among others.

From Portland and The Dalles on the Columbia River in the north, the Mt. Hood bus network stretched south to Klamath Falls just above the California border; from Springfield, Eugene and Albany in western Oregon, the line spread eastward into Idaho and down through Boise to Salt Lake City, Utah.

Much of this area was sparsely settled, and as a result, very little of Mt. Hood's traffic originated along 715 routes. The line became a "bridge carrier" that had to be fed with passengers passing through, and by far the most important feeder of Mt. Hood was Greyhound.

But in the late 1940s something strange happened to Bill Niskanen's bus business. He suddenly began losing customers. People stopped riding his buses. Waht made this really perplexing was that Mt. Hood Stages was the only line licensed to serve the most direct north-south east-west routes through the state. It appeared as though people mysteriously had stopped riding buses through Orgeon, and as the years passed Niskanen found himself on the brink of bankruptcy.

Not until the late 1960s, after nearly two decades of barely surviving, did Niskanen finally begin to learn what happened to his business. What he learned, after two years of court-ordered discovery, was that giant Greyhound had carried out a covert campaign aimed at destroying Mt. Hood Stages so that it could take over the business.

Simply put, Greyhound acquired bus lines that fed into Mt. Hood, on which Mt. Hood depended for its survival. Then, Greyhound routed unknowing passengers around the Oregon line, often taking them hundreds of miles out of their way — and charging as much as $40 a person for the detour.

On June 9, Niskanen, who is now 70, won what could be the last round of his long, lonely fight against Greyhound. The U.S. 9th circuit court of appeals in San Francisco upheld a 1973 lower court decision that granted Mt. Hood $13.2 million in damages, plus legal fees and interest that now make the total more than $18 million.

Greyhound had argued that it was exempt from antitrust litigation because the Interstate Commerce Commission had allowed it to acquire eight bus lines surronding Mt. Hood's routes and thus it was free to use the acquired routes as it pleased.

But Mt. Hood contended that, while the acquisitions themselves might have been exempt from antitrust because they had the ICC's approval, Greyhound had used the acquired lines to attempt to destroy a competitor and had lied to the ICC to get its approval.

"Other small bus line owners all told me I couldn't win against Greyhound," Niskanen said during a recent interview. "But I'd have been out of business years ago if I didn't fight. What it took was a tough Finlander from a small town to beat one of the biggest companies in the U.S."

BISLEY TROPHY FOR JACKSON

BISLEY, England (CP) — The Canadians at the Bisley shoot had their ceremonial cannon firing again Tuesday night, celebrating the victory of the Royal Canadian Army Cadets over the British and Canadian armed services.

The Canadians fired the old cannon previously for Art Grundy's victory in the Corporation Challenge cup long range event, won when the Windsor, Ont., marksman shot best score in a high wind.

Again the cannon sounded to mark the victory of Charles Jackson of Victoria, B.C., who took the Young Rifleman's Aggregate trophy.

This is the special event for the under-25 age group, shooting in the Queen's prize semi-final stage with 10 shots at each of 300, 500 and 600 yards.

Jackson tied with two British cadets, each with a score of 146, but won with the best score at the longer distances.

Jackson and Edinburgh University cadet T. R. Behrndt were even at 600 yards with scores of 49, but Jackson had one point more than his rival at 500 yards.

Lynn Joerissen, of Regina, only girl in the cadet team, came seventh with a 144 aggregate. She came two places higher than Marc Alexander, Windsor, Ont., who had the same score, but a point less than Lynn at 600 yards.

The Canadian cadets — 11 boys and Lynn — humbled the British army, navy and air force and the Canadian Armed Forces — by beating them in Tuesday's inter-service match.

Only a year ago, the British public school cadet had done the same thing.

Individual Canadian scores were: Earl Spicer of Truro, N.S., 98 out of 100 points; David Semaschuk of Invermay, Sask., 97; Ian Whitehead of Victoria, 97; Charles Jackson of Victoria, 97; Marc Alexander of Windsor, Ont., 96; Marc Aherne of Ste. Foy, Que., 96; Yves Brissette of Shawinigan, Que., 95; Daniel Belanger of Lac St. Jean, Que., 95; Bernard Morin of Berniers, Que., 95; Martin Moritz of Medicine Hat, 93; John Green of Maple Ridge, B.C., 93; and Lynn Joerisson of Regina, 90.

The teams of 12 fired 10 shots each at 300 and 600 yards, and the Canadian cadets led throughout. They had 1142 points out of a possible 1200, a six-point advantage over the British Army, whose total of 1136 was the same as that made by the British cadets when they won last year's match.

The RAF came next with 1131 points, then the British cadets with 1129, six points ahead of the Royal Navy, with the Canadian Armed Forces another two points behind.

Macs Cinch Third Spot

Victoria McDonalds clinched third place in the Western Canada Major Junior Lacrosse Leage by tripping Coquitlam J-Hawks 29-7 Tuesday night at Esquimalt Sports Centre.

The win leaves McDonalds in the likely position of facing leading Burnaby Cablevision when the playoffs begin next month. There is a mathematical chance the Bakers can catch second-place New Westminster Salmonbellies but have only six games remaining to make up a 10-point deficit.

Doug Angrove proved particularly effective for McDonalds on Tuesday with three goals, all while his team was shorthanded.

John Entzminger also scored three times for Bakers, who held period leads of 7-1 and 12-3, while double tallies were recorded by Steve Buckley, Ron Sage and Bob Derraugh and singles came from Jim Boyd, Tarey Pollock, Jeff Whitney-Griffiths, Rhys Wicks, Paul Michael, Steve Hepburn and Terry Jay.

Mike Reelie, a scoring star during the All-Star game here Monday, fired five goals for Coquitlam while singles were added by Erik Otterstrom and Tom Barichello.

Mike Duch blocked 45 shots on the Victoria net while rookie Chris Ishkanian made 43 saves for J-Hawks.

Leaf Forwards Get New Deal

TORONTO (CP) — Forwards Darryl Sittler and Lanny McDonald have agreed to terms for new five-year contracts with Toronto Maple Leafs of the National Hockey League.

Sittler, Toronto's captain, and McDonald were both entering the option year on their existing contracts and will receive about $150,000 annually.

Agreement on multi-year contracts have also been reached with John Anderson and Trevor Johansen, the Leafs' two first-round amateur draft choices who played last season with Toronto Marlboros of the Ontario Junior Hockey League.

Volleyball Coach

WINNIPEG (CP) — Dennis Nord of Winnipeg has been appointed coach of Canada's national men's volleyball team.

The Canadian Volleyball Association has also announced the selection of Mark Fenny as national team director.

Tackle 'Unwarranted, Totally Outrageous'

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Wide receiver Lynn Swann of Pittsburgh Steelers testified Tuesday that a concussion-producing blow George Atkinson aimed at him in a National Football League game last September was "unnecessary, unwarranted and totally outrageous."

Swann, on the stand in Atkinson's $2-million slander son before he was hit.

Pittsburgh coach Chuck Noll, also said he didn't see Atkinsuit against the Steelers and Atkinson, with Oakland Raiders, filed suit after Noll said Atkinson had intentionally tried to maim Swann and linked Atkinson to a "criminal element" in pro football. The trial is in its second week in U.S. district court.

Swann viewed films of Atkinson clubbing him over the head and described what he thought occurred on the play. The films showed Atkinson striking Swann as Pittsburgh's Franco Harris caught a pass several yards away. Atkinson said earlier in the trial that he was attempting to tackle Swann because he thought he was the intended receiver.

"I knew the ball was not coming to me," Swann testified Tuesday. "There was no way I could do any damage to anybody or block anyone. I was only on the field."

"Did you consider you were being tackled," asked lawyer James MacInnis.

"That's done to someone carrying the ball," Swann said. "I was wantonly struck in the back."

Flying High

Airborn during throw to first is Willie Randolph of New York Kankees, who played second base for American League in Tuesday's All-Star game at Yankee Stadium in New York. Forced out on play is Mike Schmidt (20) of Philadelphia Phillies following grounder by Cincinnati Reds' Pete Rose during eighth inning. Rose was also out at first in double play but National League went on to win, 7-5.

Martin's Hook A Trifle Late

NEW YORK (AP) — "What took you so long?" Jim Palmer sighed, and Billy Martin could do nothing more than give the Baltimore Orioles pitching ace a shrug and the hook.

Palmer wasn't out there all that long Tuesday night, but it must have seemed more like a sentence than an honor. It didn't take the National League more than a few flicks of the wrist to turn him and the rest of the American League into losers once again with a 7-5 major league baseball all-star game triumph.

The box score showed that Palmer lasted two full innings of the carnage at Yankee Stadium that gave the Nationals their sixth consecutive victory and 14th in the last 15 of the mid-season contests. But officially he made it into the third inning before Martin, the manager of New York Yankees and the American League stars, trudged to the mound and mercifully removed Palmer.

That was only moments after Steve Garvey of Los Angeles Dodgers had unloaded a mammoth home run into the American League bullpen in left-centre field to give the Nationals a 5-0 lead.

Joe Morgan of Cincinnati Reds had opened the game with a lead-off homer into the right-field stands. Dave Parker of Pittsburgh Pirates and Cincinnati's George Foster each doubled to produce the second run of the opening inning and Greg Luzinski of Philadelphia Phillies followed by smashing a two-run homer to right field to make it 4-0.

The American League did make some noises. Richie Zisk of Chicago White Sox doubled home two runs off Cincinnati's Tom Seaver in the sixth inning, Willie Randolph of the Yanks singled for another run off the former New York Met in the seventh and George Scott hit a two-run homer in the ninth.

That first-inning outburst, Parker's homer in the third and what turned out to be a game-winning two-run single by Dave Winfield of San Diego Padres off Yankee reliever Sparky Lyle made Don Sutton of Los Angeles the winner and also recipient of the game's most-valuable-player award.

"Making the all-star team is a thrill, to put it simply," the Dodger right-hander said after silencing the American League bats on just one hit and striking out four batters in his three-inning starting stint. "It's something you can't control, being named a member of the All-Star team. I was overjoyed when it happened."

For his part, Palmer was the master of the understatement.

"I guess you can say I didn't pitch very well," he observed after the five-run raking, the first time he'd been scored upon following eight shutout innings of three-hit all-star hurling.

Morgan, who started it all with his homer about a half-dozen rows into the right-field seats, seemed to be saying it wouldn't have mattered if Cy Young himself had been out there pitching for the American League.

"When you look down our lineup and see what we've got coming up after me, it's got to make you think to yourself, 'There's no way to keep these guys from getting an awful lot of runs. There's no way to beat them.' Let's face it, we're awesome."

Seaver, making his first appearance in New York since being traded to Cincinnati by the Mets barely a month ago, received a tumultuous ovation when he was introduced, a thunderous greeting far exceeding even those for two of New York's other superheroes, Willie Mays and Joe DiMaggio.

"I could've stood back and done nothing, but I sensed that wasn't what the crowd wanted me to do,' he said of his cap-waving acknowledgements that brought more waves of cheers cascading down from the tripledecked stands. "I mean, I worked 10 years for those people in this town. I wanted to thank them, too."

When someone wondered if he was disappointed in the way he pitched in his big comeback appearance, Seaver let loose with one of his familiar cackles and said: "What was wrong with the way I pitched? Nobody got hurt, did they?"

Lions Looking For Confidence

REGINA (CP) — Rookie head coach Jim Eddy, already under pressure in some areas for the slow start by Saskatchewan Roughriders this season, said Tuesday he is optimistic the team will end its five-game slump tonight against British Columbia Lions.

"I feel our men have prepared well," he said. "They've worked hard."

The Roughriders, defending Western Football Conference champions who lost all four of their pre-season games before being thumped last week by the potent Winnipeg Blue Bombers, said he respects B.C. quarterback Jerry Tagge, "but I feel confident our defensive line will get pressure on the quarterback."

B.C. gave up veteran Canadian Bill Baker in an off-season trade between the two clubs. Early judgments of the value of the trade will be based on tonight's contest.

B.C. defeated Calgary in a low-scoring contest, but Lions' head coach Vic Rapp said the victory was vital to the confidence of the rebuilding B.C. team.

"Not only do we have 15 rookies, but of the 24 guys who start on offence and defence, 15 of them are either new or out of position."

Rapp was particularly pleased with the progress of defensive end Jesse O'Neal, a Grey Cup goat last season before being traded by Saskatchewan to the Lions along with Frank Landy for Baker.

"Jesse played better in the last game than he played in the exhibitions," Rapp said at a news conference. "He started to show a spark."

The coach said O'Neal has recovered from a minor injury and all three of the former Roughriders are keen to show well against their former teammates.

Eddy says Saskatchewan, even without O'Neal, has potentially the best pass rush in the Canadian Football League with Baker and George Wells at defensive end.

A major weapon for B.C. is expected to be fullback Jim Harrison, a 240-pounder who spent some time in the National Football League with Chicago Bears.

"He has good speed for a guy that size," said Rapp. "We kept him primarily because we thought he'd complement Mike Strickland. He's a pretty good blocker, he can catch the football and he's an inside runner.

"I've been familiar with him for quite some time," said Rapp, a former Edmonton Eskimo coach who handled Harrison at University of Missouri.

"In fact, I helped recruit him, so I had a good idea what he could do."

Tagge also brings NFL experience to the Lions, who have the seasoned Gary Keithley as a backup. Tagge completed 21 of 30 passes in the opening victory over Calgary Stampeders, despite a rib injury that hampered him in the early stages.

Saskatchewan's major problem has been a combination of injuries and defections.

The Roughriders lost virtually the entire defensive backfield that helped carry them into the Grey Cup last season, where they lost to Ottawa Rough Riders, and Eddy—a late replacement for the departed John Payne—admitted he has not been able to put together as tough a unit as he would like.

Line Shuffle Pays Off As Irish Clip Burrards

VANCOUVER — An old-time familiarity was tried anew Tuesday and Victoria Shamrocks bounced league-leading Vancouver Burrards 16 10 for the first time this season in a Western Lacrosse Association game at Kerrisdale Arena.

Burrards, who now only lead the Irish by three points, won all four previous games between the clubs.

Setting the pace for Victoria was Ivan Thompson, who was re-united with former National Lacrosse League linemates Chris Hall, Larry Bell and Joe McCrea. The four played together for Boston Bolts in the now-defunct NLL during 1975.

Thompson scored four times and Hall connected once as Victoria outgunned Vancouver 9-4 in the second period and 5-3 in the final 20 minutes.

Dan Green, Pete Rushton and Charn Dhillon scored twice each for the Irish and other single goals were contributed by Ranjit Dillon, Bill Marechek, Dennis Somner, Mike Beaulac and Ron MacNeil.

Ron Pinder was the only multiple scorer for Burrards with three goals.

Shamrocks and Burrards each have three games remaining in the regular schedule.

The Victoria squad, which plays host to New Westminster Salmonbellies tonight at 8 in Memorial Arena, finishes up the 24-game schedule with games against Burrards on July 27 in Victoria and against Timbermen July 30 in Nanaimo.

Meanwhile, WLA commissioner Roy Burton of Victoria has announced a three-game suspension to Wayne Goss of Salmonbellies as the result of a stick-swinging episode involving Ward Sanderson of Burrards last week.

Goss, New Westminster's leading scorer with 29 goals and 51 assists, won't be playing tonight and will be lost to the Bellies for all but two of their remaining games.

Streit Sets Course Mark In Ontario

KINGSTON (CP) — Marlene Stewart Streit holds a three-stroke lead in the Ontario women's golf championship after setting a course record in Tuesday's opening round.

Mrs. Streit, the defending champion, had a two-under-par 71, breaking a Cataraqui Golf and Country Club woman's record set 11 years ago.

The 43-year-old Fonthill, Ont., golfer was the only player of 90 entered in the 54-hole event to break par.

Judy Ellis of Kitchener had a 74 for second spot. Cathy Sherk of Port Colborne was another stroke back. Stacy West of Toronto followed with a 78.

Streit, winner of 10 Ontario titles, played almost flawless golf around the greens and needed only 29 putts on her way to the course record. She had five birdies and three bogies in her round of 35-36.

Price Near Mark

LEXINGTON, Ky. (AP) — Laddie Dance, a horse auctioneer, paid $400,000 Tuesday night for a filly, the second-highest price ever paid for a filly in the history of the Keeneland sale.

Dance's acquisition — for $5,000 less than the world record set here in 1968 — capped the greatest sale in Keeneland's 34-year history.

A total of 324 head were sold for $27,651,000, an average of $85,343. This broke last year's record of $23,035,000 for 346 head, an average of $66,575.

The filly purchased by Dance for his wife is by Bold Bidder out of Cosmah and was consigned by John R. Gaines.

Four other yearlings, including a daughter by 1973 Triple Crown winner Secretariat, each sold for $300,000 during Tuesday night's final session.

The daughter of the Triple Crown winner out of Libro D Oro, was sold for $300,000, the same price reached by a daughter of Graustark Natural Sound.

The Secretariat filly was consigned by Warner Jones and purchased by Albert Stall, chairman of the Louisiana Racing Commission, and Earl Burke. Jones also consigned the daughter of Graustark who was purchased by Henry De Kwiatkowski of New York.

The tourney continues through the week with girls' events here and the boys' events at Bremerton, Wash.

Calder Picked As New Coach

SEATTLE (AP) — Les Calder, assistant coach with San Diego Mariners of the World Hockey Association for the past three years, was named Tuesday as head coach of Seattle Breakers of the Western Canada Hockey League.

Calder, 36, said he has been scouting the WCHL for the past five years.

Praise Flows for Canadian Driver

LONDON (CP) — British newspapers, which gave the headlines to Englishman James Hunt's victory in the British Grand Prix auto race, have taken time out to hail a young French-Canadian, as a rising star in the world of motor racing.

Gilles Villeneuve, 25, a team-mate of Hunt and a protege of the defending world champion, came 11th in Saturday's race, driving last year's model of the McLaren.

It was the Formula 1 debut for the resident of Berthierville, Que. He is committed to drive four Grand Prix races this year with Hunt's Marlboro McLaren team.

The Times says it is hoped that Villeneuve, "racing's brightest new star," will become "a regular member of the Grand Prix circuit."

"Fastest of the independents in preliminary qualifying and ninth on the grid . . . He was running a comfortable seventh at the wheel of one of McLaren's 1976 M23s until forced to make a long pit stop, The Times said.

"Rejoining two laps down, he drove harder than ever and, at the end of the day, only Hunt, James Watson, Gunnar Nilsson and Jody Scheckter all top international drivers had lapped faster.

"It was a brilliant first appearance by a driver who seems destined to become No. 2 to the champion."

The Times said a faulty gauge robbed Villeneuve of what would have been a third- or fourth-place finish.

"Anyone seeking a future world champion, need look no further than this quietly assured young man."

The Daily Telegraph says "Villeneuve was richly given the Allied Polymer Group."

The Daily Express says "Hunt looks like a champion again, Jochen Mass continues to improve . . . and the new McLaren boy, Gilles Villeneuve, a petite French-Canadian, announces a big talent."

Four-Wheeling, Hiking Are Compatible Pursuits

Fanatics on both sides of the fence would lead everyone to believe there is no possible meeting ground between mechanized and non-mechanized outdoor pursuits.

Fortunately, some of us ignore the vitrial and enjoy the best of both worlds without conflict.

Bitter relations between backpackers and four-wheel-drive enthusiasts, for instance, produce only one real result — the gradual erosion of the outdoor environment that each type of recreationist enjoys.

The only real winners in the conflict between recreation groups are the fast-buck subdivision developers and the giants of the forest industry.

Infighting reduces our capability to deal effectively with threats to the wilderness upon which both pursuits depend.

Take my own case, for instance. There is no conflict.

I'm involved with the Island Explorers, a new four-wheel-drive club based in the Victoria-Duncan area that is affiliated with the Four Wheel Drive Association of B.C.

It's been about seven years since Judy and I purchased our first four-by-four and we'd sorely miss the scope one of these go-anywhere (almost) machines gives our outdoor enjoyment.

During the winter, they have taken us skiing without the hassle of applying chains and in the summer have carried us to many out-of-the-way camping and picnicing spots inaccessible to normal vehicles.

In all seasons, they've acted out the dual purpose of everyday vehicles and a weekend fun machine.

Our club has an outing just about every month through some of the more rugged backroads of the Island. Some of the fun is meeting the challenge of getting there and back with the vehicle reasonably intact.

I can see where there could be a conflict in some of the more open areas of the province, where individual four wheelers have been cutting cross-country, but vehicle traffic on the Island is limited to old logging roads and skid trails.

Four-wheel-drive vehicles have far less impact on these roads than conventional rigs which must rely on speed and sheer rock-spewing, trench-digging power to get up certain grades.

Through the efforts of the provincial association, four-wheelers are attempting to clean up their image, which has been tarnished a little by the unthinking activities of a minority.

Many of the clubs have put on clean-up campaigns at popular camping and recreation spots and others have been erecting signs reading "Fragile Area, No Vehicles Please" and "Restricted Area, No Vehicles Please" at appropriate spots.

So, contrary to some opinions, they do care.

In addition, the proceeds from many club rallies and play-days, where racing members let off steam, have been donated to charities.

By the same token, yours truly and many other four-wheelers enjoy the relatively unencumbered freedom of backpacking.

Island Explorers' president Jim Ramsey and I were standing on snow at about the 6,000-foot level in Strathcona Park two weeks ago today.

It was an unforgettable experience — especially at the time rocks, loosened by the thawing process, started to drop off the mountain into a narrow pass we were navigating.

Probably less than two per cent of the people living here realize there is an area on the Island with scenery every bit as spectacular as that found in the Rockies.

Often, four-wheeling serves to extend our hiking and backpacking experiences further afield. We can drive to spots it takes others hours or days to reach on foot — and then launch out from there to country more suitable to travel by shank's mare.

So, the co-operation each group is beginning to show through participation in the Outdoor Recreation Council of B.C. is welcome.

Indeed, it might be a matter of survival for both pursuits.

Calgary Edges Mistake-Prone Ticats

CALGARY (CP) — Quarterback John Hufnagel combined with his favorite target, flanker Tom Forzani, for a 52-yard scoring play Tuesday night as Calgary Stampeders held off Hamilton Tiger-Cats 13-11 for their first victory of the Canadian Football League season.

The touchdown negated a potential Hamilton comeback that ended when the Tiger-Cats could not recover a short kickoff in the final minute, after a touchdown by Mike Harris and a two-point conversion had left Hamilton only three points from victory.

Both clubs struggled offensively, particularly along the ground, and Hufnagel completed only nine of 21 pass attempts. But a combination of penalties, poor execution and two turnovers helped stifle the Tiger-Cats, who won their previous game 21-20 over Toronto Argonauts.

Jack Gotta, who took over as Calgary head coach and general manager after last season, expressed some concern over Hufnagel's training-camp performances, but had no reason to object to his execution on the vital pass to Forzani.

Hufnagel, a National Football League veteran, arrived late last year to give Calgary some semblance of an offence after Joe Pisarcik and Tom Sherman had failed to get the team moving. But he was not sharp in a defeat last week by British Columbia Lions.

Forzani caught four passes for 87 of the 155 yards Hufnagel gained passing. Forzani's performance showed he is fully recovered from the wrist injury he suffered in the pre-season all-star game.

Placement specialist Cyril McFall accounted for the rest of Calgary's points with a convert and field goals of 12 and 32 yards, both in the first quarter.

Dave Pegg kicked a 12-yard field goal for Hamilton shortly before the Forzani touchdown. Harris took an 11-yard touchdown toss from Jimmy Jones, who hit Jimmy Edwards for the two-point conversion.

Jones and backup quarterback Dave Shuman combined to complete 21 of 37 pass attempts for 251 yards, but veteran Calgary tackle John Helton spearheaded a tough defence that held the Ticats to 55 yards rushing.

Calgary gained only 128 yards on the ground, almost half by Willie Burden, but Calgary did not give up a fumble or an interception. The Stampeders recovered one Ticat fumble and intercepted one pass by Jones. In addition, Ken Clark had a punt blocked in the first quarter to lead to one of McFall's field goals.

Each club lost a defensive back to injury and field judge Gordon Johnson of Winnipeg was sidelined in the final minutes.

Calgary lost Dennis Meyer in the first quarter with a suspected broken arm and Hamilton was without Dave Shaw after he injured his right leg in the third quarter.

Johnson suffered a leg injury when struck almost simultaneously by one player from each team. He was replaced by a backup official and watched the rest of the game from the Stampeder bench.

Tonight's game between the B.C. Lions and Saskatchewan Roughriders will be telecast on Channel 8 and Broadcast on CJVI (900) and CKNW (980) starting at 7 a'clock.

Gorge Welcomes Farmer Mistakes

Gorge Hotel moved back into a tie for first place with Greaves Movers by scoring four unearned runs in the seventh inning to edge Farmer Construction 5-4 in a Victoria Senior Amateur Baseball League game Tuesday at Lambrick Park.

Dan Vangylswyk and Dennis Sproule led off the seventh with singles and Mark Lawless drew a base on balls with two out to load the bases. Two successive errors produced a tie game and Mike Squire scored the winner when losing pitcher Terry Painter was charged with a balk.

Derek Drinkwater picked up the pitching victory by striking out eight batters and walking one for a four-hitter. He retired 18 of the last 19 batters and boosted his season record to 11-3.

Think Safety In Canning

LONDON, Ont. — The recent outbreak of botulism poisoning from home-canned peppers in Michigan underscores the necessity of using scientifically developed processes for safe home canning, according to a new scientific status summary released by the Joint U.S.-Canadian Committee on Food Information.

The committee is a co-operative effort of the Canadian Institute of Food Science and Technology and the Institute of Food Technologists (U.S.). "Home canning looks simple," the summary says, "but attention to every detail is essential to retention of nutrients and to safety."

The new summary stressed that a firm scientific basis for safe canning of low acid foods was established more than 30 years ago. During that period, only five botulism deaths have been attributed to the more than 800 billion containers of commercially canned foods, compared to almost that many every year from home canning.

The reason for this, according to the IFT's Panel on food safety and nutrition, is that, "the role and importance of the various factors which combine to ensure commercial sterility in canning have not been communicated effectively to the general public, nor has the importance of taking them into account in home canning."

The natural acidity of a food is one of these factors. Some foods are naturally more acid than others.

For example, according to the summary, "tomatoes (a high-acid food) can be successfully heat processed in a boiling water bath (100 degrees C.) while string beans (a low-acid food) must be processed in a pressure canner at 115 degrees C ... These natural acids have the ability to inhibit or prevent the growth of many of the microorganisms which produce spoilage and disease."

Recent publicity about "low-acid tomatoes" has led some home canners to question whether they can safely be processed in a boiling water bath, the summary says. It cited recent research by the University of Minnesota which determined that none of the supposedly low-acid tomatoes was truly low enough to permit the production of poison from botulisum bacteria. Such tomatoes can thus be safely canned in a boiling water bath.

ORIENTAL OMELETTE WILL BE LAPPED UP

Mary Moore

I know two young guys working in a small town and living in an apartment who will lap this up. They just happen to be my grandsons Gary and Dave.

So I figured that hundreds of young and old couples in our country would have a supply of eggs on hand at any time for a quick nourishing meal.

ORIENTAL OMELETTE FOR TWO
(or maybe 3 reducers)

Sauce:

1 tsp. corn starch
1 tsp. granulated sugar
1 tsp. lemon juice
1 tbsp. soy sauce shake of pepper
½ c. cold water

Omelette:

2 tbsp. butter (divided)
¼ c. finely chopped green onion tops
¼ lb. chopped fresh mushrooms (or equivalent canned)
¾ c. bean sprouts (if canned, DRAIN)
2 tbsp. water (or bean sprout or mushroom liquid if canned are used)
4 eggs
¼ tsp. salt

First make the Sauce by stirring together in a small pot the corn starch, sugar, lemon juice, soy sauce, pepper and water. Now cook, stirring, until thick. Set aside.

To make the Omelette in large frying pan melt ½ tablespoon of the butter and add the onion and gently saute, stirring 5 minutes. Add mushrooms and bean sprouts and saute 2 minutes longer. Skim out of pan and keep warm.

Beat the eggs with the salt and water (or bean sprout or mushroom liquid) until foamy. Add remaining 1½ tablespoons butter to same pan in which vegetables were sauteed and heat until bubbling and BEGINNING to turn gold. Immediately tip the egg mixture and cook over high heat until edges are cooked, then lift one edge and tilt pan and allow egg liquid to flow under. When almost set spoon sauteed vegetable mixture along centre of omelette. When bottom is light brown loosen half of omelette with spatula. Slowly tip pan and roll omelette onto heated platter. Reheat sauce and pour over omelette and cut in half to serve two. Cut in three to serve three reducers.

The Chinese serve this with rice and stir-fried broccoli — a quick satisfying summer supper with iced tea.

By LESTER COLEMAN, M.D.

You once wrote about a technique that could be used by people who can't swallow pills. I lost it. — Mrs. S. S., N.J.

Dear Mrs. S.:

For years, doctors have watched patients go through all kinds of neck gyrations in order to swallow a small pill. This becomes particularly confusing when they learn that these same people are able to swallow large chunks of meat or bread with ease.

The method of pill swallowing was suggested by Dr. William B. Robey, in Arizona. He tells his patients to take a sip of water and hold it in the mouth. Then he suggests, "Tilt the head back as though to gargle, and drop the pill on top of the water. Then, with another sip of water, the pill goes on its way."

Recently, I came across an ingenious drinking glass designed to make pill-taking easy. Inside the glass there is a small built-in partition with a tiny shelf. The pill is placed on the shelf and the person drinks normally, as if it were just water. Apparently, this is a great help for problem pill-takers.

The chemically safe plastic glass is called "Drink-a-Pill." It is manufactured by the Newday Corporation in St. Paul, Minn.

I have a heart condition. I've been told that it may be necessary for me to have my gall bladder removed. My greatest worry is that my heart problem will kick up during the operation. — Mrs. G. G.

Dear Mrs. G.

I gather that the surgery is not being contemplated immediately. Nevertheless, I would discuss this entire matter with your doctor now. There is no need to build up a lot of anxiety about this entire problem. You must know that patients with severe heart disease have all kinds of major surgery done successfully on the heart itself.

The present excellence of anesthesia, coupled with preoperative care, reduces problems like yours considerably.

During surgery, all patients with even the slightest heart problem are carefully monitored. Their blood pressure, their blood volume and fluids, are carefully maintained. The duration of the operation for the removal of the gall bladder has been reduced by the refinements of modern-day surgery.

You should not spend your time living in dread about a situation that you have undoubtedly exaggerated in your own mind.

indoor gardens

By LYNN and JOEL RAPP

Dear Lynn and Joel: A gift of a magnificent rabbit's foot fern was bestowed upon me for Mother's Day. It was lacy and full at first but now, in spite of all my effort, it's drying up and turning brown. I need help quick. — Helen.

Dear Helen: Your rabbit's foot fern (or Davallia Feejeenisis) prefers the shady outdoors to the indoors. It can live a long productive life outdoors during the spring and summer. Bring it indoors to your sunniest window or, even better, put it under a Grow Lite during the winter.

The amazing feature of the rabbit's foot fern is not the foliage, which resembles carrot tops, but the surface rhizomes, which bear a remarkable likeness to rabbit's feet. The plant does best in a moss basket for growth, as well as to show off its "feet."

Like most ferns, Davallia will benefit from daily misting, where low humidity is a factor. Dunking the entire basket at least once a week in warm water (more often in summer) ought to be enough watering. But if a fern doesn't get enough moisture and fresh air it will turn brown. Plant food added to the water during the growth period is advised.

BAKED PEARS

8 firm pear halves, peeled and cored
½ cup lemon juice
½ cup liquid honey
½ cup rum or, ½ teaspoon rum flavoring
¼ cup chopped blanched almonds, toasted.

Arrange pears, cut side up, in baking dish. Combine lemon juice, honey and rum or flavoring; pour over pears.

Bake uncovered at 350 degrees F. for 1½ hours, or until pears are tender, basting every 15 minutes with syrup in pan. Sprinkle with toasted almonds.

Serve warm with sweet or dairy sour cream as a dessert, or serve cold with cottage cheese or yogurt as a salad. Serves 4.

Intact Head Is Best

OTTAWA (CP) — Always leave the head of a lettuce intact when storing it in the refrigerator, say home economists at the food advisory division, Agriculture Canada.

Division experts say lettuce should be rinsed in cold water before storing it. Remove discolored or wilted leaves, drain, dry and refrigerate up to one week in a tightly closed plastic bag or container with a paper towel to absorb excess moisture.

When standing in front of the avalanche of lettuce at the supermarket, look for the firmest, freshest, unblemished head in the pile they say.

When choosing the type of lettuce you want, there are several to choose from.

Boston or butterhead lettuce has a loose head with soft, waxy green leaves that separate easily. Leaf lettuce is light-green with loosely bunched leaves and ragged edges.

Romaine or cos lettuce is descri described as having an elongated, upright head and dark-green outer leaves, shading to almost white at the root end.

Other greens include curly endive chicory, escarole broad-leaved endive and French or Belgian endive.

Outdoor Picnics Can Be Fun, Especially If Everyone Helps

hilda beastall

By HILDA BEASTALL

Picnics at home in the garden or in nearby parks are a low cost form of entertainment for children and their friends during holidays, adults and their friends at weekends, and the family as a whole at any time.

Low cost refers to the food, not the transportation costs. After paper and pencil planning, a quick good lunch or supper can be put together in short order. Its success depends on whether there is already a number of staple foods in cupboard and refrigerator. Involving several helpers, each with a special duty, is another way to a successful picnic.

Of everyday value and excellent for picnics too, are Cheddar cheese in random blocks bought when offered at a special lower price occasionally by some stores; small size eggs for hard-boiling; homemade wholewheat buns or Graham Bread (see today's recipe); peanut butter; green vegetables and carrots for salads; and a jar of homemade salad dressing and of yogurt.

Together with well ripened bananas, home grown berries and, later, some local apples, you have the makings of a picnic anywhere, at home or elsewhere, a pleasant way to relax and entertain without tension.

As an enthusiastic picnicker for the first 30 years in Victoria, I found that chinaware on the picnic table lends a festive air that is appreciated by most. There's no reason why it should meet with more disasters than when used at home. Pack it safely in small cartons, easy to carry to the car and to the picnic table. And see that the cartons are not used for seats. Everyone enjoys the meal from a real plate. Disposable sets are expensive too.

There is more than one reason for choosing a table or a ground spot, if no table available, in the shade or at least partial shade. Not only does it become uncomfortable sitting in full summer sun to eat, but the food loses its freshness and much of its nutrition when exposed to sunlight. Particularly is this true with salads of potatoes with salad dressings and eggs, meats; and milk in any form. These quickly develop the toxic botulism organisms which every year are cited as one cause of food poisonings at mass gatherings without adequate refrigeration of foods. It is better to be a little short of these types of food than to take so much that you take some home to use later.

The same precautions advised as necessary for preserving fresh food quality at home are needed at the picnic table whether in the garden or in the park.

The container of milk can be at ground level nearby in the shade. If there is a stream of cold water handy, put some into an empty pan which may have transported the buns and the cheese, then stand the milk container in the pan. Cover with a wet cloth for added coolness.

Taking along a half dozen clean dish towels, used in packing the cartons, provides clean coverings to throw over the bread, cookies, cheese or salad. These must all be protected from flies as well as from light and heat.

When we think of it, preserving the quality of good food is another way of saving money or cutting down on the cost of living. Taking home-prepared food to picnics is certainly less costly than buying everything readymade, and preserving its freshness increases the chance of maintaining health — an enormous money-saver in itself. Think of it on a national scale and it is staggering.

Wholewheat bread or large flat individual buns made from Batter Bread yeast mixture, using part soy four, part rice flour or oatflakes, are good things to have on hand ready for a spontaneous picnic. The top-of-refrigerator freezer will store these for three to four weeks.

A type of Graham Bread, made without yeast and without fat of any kind is satisfying and tasteful for picnics. Slice thinly at the table, then let those who want more, cut thicker slices, but don't let homemade bread be wasted. It is too good.

Graham Flour was the old type of Canadian and American flour milled from the whole wheat grain, containing both the bran and the germ of the wheat. It was neither refined or bleached. By using today's wholewheat flour and adding a portion of bran and germ, we get something like Graham Flour to make Graham Bread. Make it once and you will agree that it is good.

GRAHAM BREAD

2 Tbsp. sugar
1½ cups buttermilk (see NOTE below)
1 tsp. baking soda
1 Tbsp. dark molasses
1 cup unbleached flour
1 cup wholewheat flour
¼ cup bran (bulk, not packaged)
¼ cup wheat germ
1 tsp. salt

NOTE: Buttermilk adds a special flavor to some baking, so I keep a tin of Buttermilk Powder to make small amounts when needed. Proportions are: 3 tablespoons to 1 cup water; or 4½ to 1½ cups water. This is not for drinking by the glassful for it lacks the fresh flavor of "real" farm buttermilk.

Measure all ingredients in order, adding them to the mixing bowl, stirring as you add.

Grease and lightly dust with flour a 9x5x3-inch pan.

Spoon mixture into pan; bake in moderate oven 177 deg.C. for about 45 minutes.

Cover loosely with foil for last 15 minutes if necessary, but this bread does not burn easily on top. It does need to be cooked in the center, so test with a clean knife.

Once you are used to this recipe, try it with two cups wholewheat flour instead of one and one.

Delicious eaten hot, cold or toasted lightly. This is a dense moist loaf, well adapted for back-pack and picnic lunches. Keep on refrigerator shelf wrapped in plastic film; its moisture and density causes moulding of the whole wheat ingredients if left at room temperature in a bread tin. It will, however, keep a week without spoiling in refrigerator, or longer no doubt in the freezer above.

This Graham Bread goes well with everything — cheese, peanut butter, vegetable and fruit salads, dates and other dried fruits, or indeed without anything else at all.

Make the effort to be not "too busy" to plan and prepare nutritious summer meals indoor or out, for yourself alone, or for and with the family, and then enjoy some of them outdoors on deck, patio, balcony or at the park or beach.

dear abby

He's Not Too Old

DEAR ABBY: I am a 61-year-old bachelor who never married because I took care of my widowed mother who just died at the age of 93.

I am somewhat withdrawn and never had any girlfriends, although I'm told I'm above average in looks.

I am acquainted with a gal who looks about 30 and used to work in my bank. We were both invited to the same party last Christmas, and I haven't seen her since because she's not at the bank anymore.

I sent her some flowers for St. Valentine's Day, and she wrote me a very nice letter thanking me. (I'm enclosing a copy of it.)

Should I call or write to her to thank her for the note, and ask her to dinner?

I have about $140,000 in the bank so I could probably afford a wife if I could get one. Or do you think I'm too old to be considered eligible? — BASHFUL.

DEAR BASHFUL: I think you're too ELIGIBLE to be considered OLD. From her note I would say she is panting to date you. Don't waste any more precious time. Call and ask her to dinner!

DEAR ABBY: I've been hearing so much lately about life after death, and since I've donated my eyes and kidneys to the organ banks I'm kind of worried for fear there might be something to this.

After all, if I do come back, gee willikers, I don't want to be walking around with some of my parts missing, do I?

Can you advise me? — JACK.

DEAR JACK: Don't worry. If there IS life after death, when you return you'll have all the parts you need.

DEAR ABBY: A young mother whose baby had died said she felt no consolation when friends said, "Don't worry, you'll have another baby." She went on to say, "if my husband were to die, I doubt that anyone would say, 'you'll have another one.' "

Well, don't you believe it. Within a month after my husband died, people were saying, "You're still young and attractive enough to find another man." I wasn't even thinking about finding another man. I just wanted to get over my grief.

Another thing that bothered me after becoming a widow was the number of people who said, "If there is anything I can do for you, just let me know."

All you people out there who really want to help a widow: Don't wait for her to call you, call HER, and invite her to dinner or to a movie or on a family outing, the way you did when her husband was still living.

I'm not out after anybody's husband, but I do need to be around adults, and to feel that people still care about me. I'm 35 and the mother of three. — YOUNG WIDOW.

DEAR WIDOW: Try Parents Without Parents. They're a great group. And a timely reminder to those who are still lucky enough to be going two-by-two: Invite a widow, divorcee, or any single male or female to your next party or family outing.

Common ¢ents

By KATE MacQUEEN

Most people walk into a store and pick out a replacement fluorescent tube without checking the light's color. A white fluorescent tube gives a yellowish cast to almost all room colors, says the utility company's lighting expert. A "soft white" grays greens, brightens blues and adds a pinkish tone to neutral colors. So check the tube's lighting glow so you won't change, by mistake, your present color scheme at home.

When a building contractor adds a new room to your house, all the scrap lumber that piles up is yours. It's part of the total contracting price. So take out all of the pieces you can possibly use. If you don't it will be hauled away, and a block of wood might be just what you'll need to brace a shelf some day. Or, you could burn the scrap on a chilly night. Think ahead; that scrap pile could be a treasure of necessities.

HAVANA (Reuter) — Typhoid has broken out in Havana, Cuban authorities said today. A government warning published in newspapers said the outbreak was in the old section of the city and authorities were taking steps to control it.

French Hamburger Has Flare

tiny bennett

Hamburgers in all shapes, types and flavorings are very popular during this holiday time of the year. And just lately the meat counters where I shop have been featuring very good ground burger beef at 85c a pound.

Naturally, you can pay all kinds of prices for good ground beef, but the hamburger should be juicy and I like to get the 85c grind, because it contains just enough fat to lean meat to produce a hamburger of the texture that I prefer.

We are so used to the hamburger as being the Canadian all-purpose snack, that we often fail to remember that when prepared and cooked with care and flair, this popular food item can come up to just about gourmet quality.

Some years ago when I took my then small daughter into a fine restaurant, she didn't even glance at the menu, but stated very firmly to the waiter that she'd like a nice big hamburger.

I was rather shaken up, but the waiter didn't turn a hair. "Most of the children ask for a hamburger," he smiled. "You leave it to me, we'll serve a real hamburger — the type that our French chef just loves to cook."

The meal was a great success, and Tracy just loved her "French hamburger." I got the recipe, have since changed it around quite a bit, and now have no qualms at all in suggesting that my readers try:

For four ¼-lb burgers, get one pound of ground beef with some fat to lean content and put the meat in a large bowl and fluff it up lightly with a fork.

Pour on top of the meat one envelope of dried onion soup, one tsp dried parsley, one tsp dried oregano, two tsp salt, several grinds of black pepper and several dashes of sweet paprika powder.

Mix everything into the meat thoroughly but carefully, so that the loose texture is retained, place into the fridge and leave for one hour.

I serve this burger as a main course, so I generally use the hour while the meat is refrigerated to get ready the vegetable courses, or side-dishes to go with the burger.

To prepare, turn the oven on to 200 and put in an oven dish that has crumpled foil in the bottom.

Heat a large skillet with two tbs butter and two tbs olive oil, and from a wide crusty Italian loaf cut four big slices — one inch thick.

Fry the bread round in the butter and oil mix until golden brown on both sides and then place them on the foil in the oven pan to stay hot and crisp and to drain excess oil.

Add two more tbs oil and butter to the pan, bring to almost smokey heat, shape the meat into four equal-size burgers about one-inch thick and sautee in the skillet, moving them around carefully so that they all get equal heat, and turning when the underside is a rich crusty brown.

Repeat the moving of the burgers in the skillet until the second side is done — they should be crusty brown on the outside, but juicy all the way through.

Drain out most of the oil, put the skillet back on the head and when the pan gets very hot pour in one cup of dry red wine and let it foam and fizzle all around the burger. Then turn the burgers and slosh the skillet back and forth so that the wine and meat juices wash around the meat.

To serve, put the rounds of sauteed toast onto a hot plate, put a burger on top of each slice of crisp bread and spoon the wine and meat juices sauce over each burger.

Served just like this, the French burger makes for a delicious snack and there is almost no limit to the ways in which this can be expanded.

When the luscious beefsteak tomatoes are available I simply slice a big one onto each plate and dust the slices with a little salt.

You can serve the burgers with a side platter of fresh salad, and that will give you a pretty good balanced meal; or you can make it into a main meal with hot vegetables such as green or wax beans, broccoli, or even sauteed celery — the neglected vegetable that is so good hot.

There's nothing fixed or rigid around the seasoning list. You can experiment and come up with your own flavor treat — but try French burgers. They are really superior.

Many Popular Foods Have High Fat Levels

eating right

By RUTH FREMES and ZAK SABRY

For a nation that is so worried about getting fat, there is very little attention being given to the amount of actual fat we eat. Many of our popular foods are high in fat.

Take the average hamburger. Almost two thirds of the calories in a hamburger come from fat. Hot dogs have four out of each five calories from fat. Friend chicken will have half or more of the calories as fat calories.

The Nutrition Canada study found that the average Canadian diet contains about 40 per cent of the calories as fat calories. Most of this fat comes from meat, poultry, eggs, milk, cheese, butter, margarine, lard and various salad and cooking oils. The major part of the fat in our diets comes from animal sources and is of the saturated variety. A great deal of the fat we consume is hidden. It's in processed meats, marbled cuts of meat, cream cheeses and processed foods to which the manufacturer has added fat. Even when the manufacturer declares that the added fat is vegetable oil, it is often in the form of coconut or palm oils, both of which are rich in saturated fatty acids.

Recently, the Committee on Diet and Cardiovascular disease recommended that Canadians reduce the calories from fat and cut down on saturated fat specifically. They urged industry to keep this recommendation in mind in developing new food products. They called for the repeal of the laws that prevent industry from developing and marketing foods that are low in saturated fat.

While experts, industry and government work out what should and should not be done with our foods, what can we do with our diet to ensure that it is beneficial? The simple answer is to find out what foods are high in fat and particularly in saturated fat and substitute for them equally nourishing foods that are low or reasonable in fat.

Let us define first what would be a reasonable level of fat in a food. Judging by the results of many studies, we should aim at a level of about 30 per cent fat calories or less. If we eat a food that is above that, we should balance it with a foood that is below 30 per cent.

To give you an idea how that various foods stack up, we will list the foods that are over 50 per cent of fat calories, those which are between 30 and 50 per cent, and those which are under 30 per cent of calories.

Foods with over 50 per cent fat calories: cream cheese, wieners, lunch meats like salami and bologna, tongue, eggs, hamburgers (regular, not lean), canned salmon (packed in oil, not in broth), deep-fried chicken, potato chips, most cheese and cheese spreads.

Foods between 30 and 50 per cent fat calories: milk (whole or partly skimmed, 2 per cent), most cuts of beef or pork or lamb, chicken or turkey, canned salmon (packed in broth), creamed cottage cheese, cheese sandwich, peanut butter sandwich.

Foods with less than 30 per cent fat calories: most breakfast cereals (other than the granola type), porridge, skim milk, uncreamed cottage, cheese, most fresh or frozen or canned fish (packed in broth or water), bread, most fruits (except avocados), most vegetables.

Super Supper Salads

On those hot summer days there's nothing more pleasing to the appetite (or easier to prepare) than a salad. Even the man in your family will be tempted with a hearty main dish salad.

Main dish salads are practically a meal in themselves and often resemble a casserole or one-dish dinner. Include a protein food such as meat, cheese or eggs, plus vegetables or fruit and a starchy food. Keep the ingredients crisp and cold so your salad retains its freshness and crunch at serving time.

Food consultants at the food advisory division of Agriculture Canada have developed delicious main dish salads.

Serve these salads as the basis for a meal and we promise no one will call them rabbit food!

Tips on Freezing Vegetables

It's hard to resist those crisp, rich-colored, fresh vegetables as you pass them by at roadside markets, produce counters or even in your own garden.

The season's short and the days of garden-fresh vegetables won't be with us for long. What you don't eat fresh, you can put in freezer bags to enjoy through the winter season.

With rising food prices, you'd be wise to plan just how much and what you and your family will use in the way of vegetables from this fall till next summer. Then, with your list in hand, embark on a shopping spree to choose the best quality vegetables you can afford with the one purpose in mind of freezing enough for next winter.

Even with the best quality produce and freezer supplies, you can't be guaranteed of top quality results. The final key to success when freezing vegetables is in how you do it.

There are only a few rules to ensure success, but if you skip even one you may be disappointed with your final results.

Here are a few tips to follow whenever you freeze vegetables:

All vegetables, with the exception of chives, leeks, herbs, hot or sweet peppers, rutabagas (yellow turnips) and tomatoes, require blanching if you plan to keep them for long-term storage—anything over two months. Otherwise, you will end up with frozen vegetables that lose their flavor, color and texture, pick up off-flavors, and become tough. They also lose precious vitamins.

The process of blanching means putting a small amount of vegetables in a large quantity of boiling water ute. A good rule of thumb: period of time. The time depends on the vegetable, but whatever the product, never put more in the pot than will keep the water from returning to a boil in more than a minute. A good rule of thumb: allow at least 1 gallon of water for each pound of vegetable. If it's a leafy vegetable like spinach, use two gallons of water.

Use a wire basket, screen or a large piece of cheesecloth to enclose the vegetable before dunking into the boiling water. This will ensure there is no delay in removing the vegetable from the water once the blanching is completed.

Start counting blanching time only when the water returns to a boil (no more than one minute).

As soon as the blanching time is up, quickly dunk the vegetable in water that is being kept cold with a block of ice or ice cubes or under cold running water. The faster the vegetable cools, the better the quality. Drain, then quickly dry on a large absorbent towel.

Seal in freezer bags and freeze immediatey in a freezer that registers 0 degree F (—18C) or lower. Never layer packages on top of one another.

Most vegetables are prepared for blanching just as you would prepare them for your dinner table tonight. They should be washed, peeled, sliced or whatever else is necessary for any particular variety.

Corn-on-the-cob should be husked and the silk removed. Trim the ends and place in a wire basket or a cheesecloth bag. Blanch for 7 minutes if the cobs are small, 9 if they are medium and 11 minutes for large cobs. Remember to cool quickly! Whatever you do, don't freeze corn-on-the-cob still in the husk.

There are a few vegetables that freeze well without blanching. Tomatoes, green peppers, chives and herbs are good examples of such vegetables.

Tomatoes can be frozen whole. Just wash, dry and package in freezer bags. Suck out the air; twist-tie, label and freeze. Don't expect to use frozen tomatoes as fresh ones, because when they are thawed they absolutely lose their body and actually collapse. But they are ideal for stews, soups or in other cooked dishes. The skins may be tough. To remove the skin from a frozen tomato, hold the frozen tomato under hot running water. The skin will crack and easily pull away from the flesh.

Chives, leeks and fresh herbs such as marjoram, dill, mint, or basil can be frozen by packaging, as is, in freezer bags.

Green or hot peppers are best frozen whole. Cut off the stem, remove seeds from the top and rinse out with cold water to remove any stray seeds. Package in two freezer bags.

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 ♣	Pass	1 ♡	Pass
3 NT	Pass	Pass	Pass

Opening lead: Six of ◇.

North made an inspired guess when he elected to respond with one heart (instead of passing) on his five high-card points. And South made the winning decision when he rebid three notrump (instead of two notrump). But South messed things up in the play.

East put up the diamond queen on the opening lead, and it was permitted to win the trick. East continued with the diamond ten, and when declarer again played low, West overtook with the jack. A third diamond lead then drove out South's ace, a spade being discarded from dummy.

Dummy was now entered — for the first and last time — via the heart king, and the queen of clubs was laid down. When East played low, and the queen won the trick, the nine of clubs was led. Again East played low, and South was forced to overtake the nine with his ten.

South next cashed his ace of clubs, hoping to catch East's king. As is evident, he didn't. All declarer could now make were eight tricks: two spades, two heart, one diamond, and three clubs.

I am sure that declarer recognized that he needed four club tricks to fulfill his contract. This, in turn, depended on East's being the possessor of the club king, so that repeated finesses could be taken against that card. But declarer went about it in the wrong way. As he played the hand, he was able to take only two finesses against East's king. By proper play, he would have been able to take three finesses.

The nine of clubs (instead of the queen) should have been led on the initial club lead. With the nine winning, the queen would then follow. And when the queen would win, declarer would still be in dummy to take a third club finesse. He would now bring home four club tricks.

YOUR HOROSCOPE

Astrological Forecast for Thursday, July 21

By SYDNEY OMARR

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Lie low — no commitments. Wait for additional information. Time is on your side. Those who want you to sign up or join up are likely to be misinformed — or could have ulterior motive. Protect yourself. Insist on financial accounting, a "performance clause." You'll understand!

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): You get job done — views are verified, you gain added recognition among peers. Aries, Libra figure prominently. Accent on work, health, special services, news from relative in transit. You'll have opportunity to "let go" of losing proposition.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Creative resources come to fore — you are able to impress, imprint, to show that your own style is best for you. Ability to graphically illustrate major points moves you towards success. Leo, Aquarius persons figure prominently — so does the number "1."

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Key is to conserve energy — settle down, get emotional breather, second wind. Older associate, family member makes demands. Ride with the tide. You'll have chance to improve home life and structure of residence. Wait and see!

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Good lunar aspect coincides now with short journeys, notes, ideas, calls from relatives, expansion of activities. Social life accelerates — Gemini, Sagittarius persons figure in picture. Make inquiries. Give full rein to intellectual curiosity. Excellent for writing, advertising and publishing.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Emphasis on payment, collection, protection of valuables, recovering of lost or stolen articles. Be specific, observant, willing to review and revise — don't feel you are "married" to status quo. Debt will be repaid.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Lunar cycle is such that your judgment, feelings, intuition, hunches are "on the nose." Means be direct, independent, innovative, confident. Wear bright blue, if possible. Stick to number "5." Make new contacts, starts. Be a pioneer, especially in spirit.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Low-key "climate" is best — what had been a frightening prospect can turn out to be favorable. You get peek backstage — secret is revealed. Dreams, prophecies are part of scenario. There is talk concerning domicile, possible change of residence. Taurus is in picture.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Accent on friends, hopes, wishes, reward derived from business enterprise. Define terms. Improve techniques — steer clear of one who promises something for nothing. Romance is in picture, but protect self in emotional clinches. Yes, you do understand!

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Your natural talents, abilities are rewarded. Cycle is such that you get promoted, obtain appointment with one who pulls strings, who can authoritatively give orders. You have added pressure, responsibility, but gain more recognition. Member of opposite sex is very much a part of scenario.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Review past, apply lessons learned. Open lines of communication. Aries, Libra figure prominently — so does the number "9." Language barrier is overcome — more persons are concerned, interested and ready to applaud you. Get doing!

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Shed light on area previously feared, dark with doubt. Be firm in belief that you are strong, creative and have right to a second chance. Leo aids. Money affecting partner or mate is major subject of discussion.

IF JULY 21st IS YOUR BIRTHDAY, you have fine sense of humor, showmanship. You are more conscious of appearance than average person. Your weight often is subject of comment. You are fond of travel, adore fun, humor and people — and you should work with the written word. You possess intense curiosity about the world, yourself, why you are here. Gemini, Sagittarius persons play important roles in your life. October could be your most significant month of 1977, a year featuring readjustment, recovery from emotional setback, preparation of handling new responsibilities.

ANDERSON HINTS HE MIGHT RUN

Former provincial Liberal leader and MP David Anderson said Tuesday there are good reasons why Prime Minister Trudeau will call a federal election by the end of this month.

And he hinted he might be available as a Liberal candidate in one of three area ridings while insisting he has not made up his mind whether he is ready to re-enter federal politics.

An intransigent opposition is blocking the present parliament from doing much and putting off an election until next spring will mean another year of little progress, he said.

Trudeau isn't counting on an overwhelming victory but wants a better geographic spread and a working majority. An election now would enable a new government to get to a productive Parliament a year sooner than waiting until next year, said Anderson.

He said he doesn't know whether he would seek a Liberal nomination if an election is called, but he does believe he could contribute more if a suitable opportunity arose.

ANDERSON
. . . vote call soon . . .

The federal ridings of Victoria, Esquimalt-Saanich or Cowichan-Malahat cover areas where he is known and one of these would be a logical place if he were to run, he said.

Anderson is currently representing the B.C. Wildlife Federation in roles related to oil tanker traffic on the coast.

Dief Gears For Fall Election

SAINT JOHN, N.B. (CP) — Former prime minister John Diefenbaker says a federal election will be held this fall and again he will be seeking a seat in the Commons where he has served since 1940.

Diefenbaker, 81, said that he made preparations to rent, starting Sept. 1, a building which will serve as campaign headquarters for the Progressive Conservatives in his Prince Albert, Sask., riding.

He said he predicted three months ago that the election would be held Oct. 2.

"When Trudeau said there wouldn't be an election, I immediately concluded there would be."

In a speech to a luncheon following the opening of Loyalist Day celebrations here, Diefenbaker said he has found that people across Canada have become apprehensive about where Canada is going.

"Too many politicians express private opinions privately and public opinions not at all," he said.

Alta. Liberals Confident

By PAUL WHITELAW
Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — Prime Minister Trudeau was told Monday that the federal Liberals could pick up as many as six or seven Alberta seats in the next election — whether it takes place this fall or next spring.

The confident prediction that the Conservative's Alberta shutout is about to end — regardless of the timing of an election — came from provincial Liberal leader Nick Taylor.

He joined with the Liberal leaders of the nine other provinces — only two of them premiers — at a day-long meeting in an Ottawa hotel to thrash out election scenarios.

If Trudeau was counting on the advice of the provincial leaders to swing his decision on an election date, he may be no closer to making up his mind.

Taylor and some of the other leaders who ran a gauntlet of reporters when the meeting adjourned indicated the group was about evenly divided on when an election should be called.

"There's no strong feeling one way or the other," noted Taylor.

But he said that Gerard Levesque, interim leader of the provincial Liberal party in Quebec that was decimated by the separatist Parti Quebecois last November, strongly favors a fall vote.

"The Quebec Liberals don't want a spring election because they will be going through the process of holding a leadership convention at that time."

Levesque brushed off reporters' questions, saying: "I didn't come here to discuss an election."

In addition to an election date, the provincial leaders raised a variety of local concern, such as transportation policy.

Stuart Smith, leader of the Ontario Liberals who replaced the NDP as the official opposition in that province's June election, said he spoke out against the idea of a fall election.

He said Trudeau should hold off because of the "absence" of a campaign issue — adding that national unity and Quebec's language bill do not qualify at this time.

Smith said his party's recent gains were due in part to voters' perceptions that there was 'no reason" for the election called by Conservative Premier Bill Davis.

Gordon Head Squad Clicks

Gordon Head held off a late surge to trip Esquimalt 11-9 in a first-round game of the Greater Victoria Little League baseball championship tournament Tuesday at Sidney.

Drew Farrell drove in five runs with a triple and two doubles as Gordon Head jumped to an 11-3 lead after three innings.

Robbie Williams led Esquimalt batting with two doubles.

The win moved Gordon Head into a winner's bracket game Thursday against defending-champion Triangle while Esquimalt will meet the loser of tonight's 6:30 game between Hampton and American on Saturday.

The winner of the six-team, double-loss elimination tourney advances to the best-of-three Vancouver Island playoff later this month.

MERCHANTS EXTEND McGINNIS LEAD

Bate Hurlers Fan 26 Out of 27

John Clemens had the dubious distinction of being the only player from Heywood Men's League All-Stars to go out on a pop fly as Victoria Bate downed their hosts 6-0 in an exhibition game Tuesday night at Heywood Avenue Park.

Dave Ruthowski and reliever Andy Konopacki, who came in during the sixth inning of a nine-inning affair, combined to supply 26 of the 27 outs with strikeouts while hurling a five-hitter for Bate.

Ruthowski struck out 15 batters, Konopacki struck out 11 and each yielded only one base on balls.

In addition, Ruthowski connected for a single and a double in three trips to the plate to score once and drive in one run.

Carl Walker led the 10-hit Bate attack with a double and two singles in four trips and Bob Burrows, who tagged a solo homer in the ninth during three trips, scored three runs.

Victoria Bate leaves Friday on a 14-game road trip through the United States.

In Stuffy McGinnis Men's League play, Sooke Merchants moved four points ahead of the pack by nudging Seaboard Construction 6-5 at Sooke Athletic Park and Ingraham Hotel moved to within three points of runner-up Victoria Athletics with a 13-0 romp over Molsons at Central Park.

Alden Govenlock bashed a run-scoring double and Norm Goudie connected for a two-run single to lead the Sooke win.

Jack Lundquist was the leading batter for Ingraham with two singles in three turns at the plate to score three times, and drive in two runs. Mel Nelson struck out eight and didn't allow any bases on balls while pitching a three-hitter for Ingraham.

At Sanscha Park, Don Frampton smacked a solo home in the bottom of the seventh to help Seaboard Properties to a 2-1 decision over Travelodge in a Sidney Men's League game.

In Victoria Senior Women's League play, leading GSV Combos tripped Colony Motor Inn 9-3 and Victoria Athletics nipped CRESC Angels 5-4 at Hyacinth Park.

Marilyn Moen led the 11-hit Combo attack with two triples and Carol McDonough picked up a fourth straight win while pitching Athletics to victory.

At Macdonald Park, Strathcona Hotel advanced to the final by defeating Cliff McKay 8-4 in the deciding game of a best-of-three semi-final playoff in the Macdonald Men's League.

WHA Clubs Continue Pitch for NHL Entry

TORONTO (CP) — Eight World Hockey Association franchises seeking entry into the National Hockey League met Tuesday to discuss details of their applications and WHA president Bill MacFarland said the documents will be in the hands of NHL officials by the end of the week.

MacFarland said he expects a meeting between the NHL fact-finding committee on merger and the WHA candidates—Quebec Nordiques, Edmonton Oilers, Winnipeg Jets, Calgary Cowboys, New England Whalers, Birmingham Bulls, Cincinnati Stingers and Houston Aeros—to take place after the applications are received by the NHL.

The papers "are all in order as far as we're concerned, based on the assumptions that we're making," he added.

"The markets in those cities are acceptable (to the NHL). Some of the buildings are short of NHL standards, but they'll all be adding seats to bring them up to the 13,000 minimum capacity. Quebec, Winnipeg and New England will have to expand their facilities over the three-year period."

MacFarland said the eight clubs are financially solvent, a fact which will be of the utmost concern to the NHL fact-finding committee.

"The teams might have lost money, but the principles behind them are on a sound financial base."

Johnny F. Bassett, owner of Birmingham Bulls, said Tuesday night that each team included a little something extra in its application form—a cheque for an amount he wouldn't specify.

"It wasn't a very big one, but they indicated that they wanted one as an act of good faith."

MacFarland said that although the WHA hasn't considered an alternate plan in the case that the expansion merger falls through, the league is ready to draw up a schedule for its remaining teams.

LOPPING more than eight seconds off the previous mark, 18-year-old Debbie Scott of Esquimalt Mercuries shattered Canadian junior women's 3,000-metre record Tuesday. She was timed in nine minutes, 22.6 seconds in Adidas Grand Prix track and field series at Richmond.

Whitecaps Deal Ord to Sounders

Times News Services

Hawaii got goals from four different players, including Jim Henry on a penalty, to defeat Washington Diplomats 4-2 in the only North American Soccer League game scheduled Tuesday night.

Hawaii's other goals came from Vic Kodelja, Peter Nover and Keith Robson.

Meanwhile, in Vancouver, Whitecaps sold midfielder-forward Tommy Ord to the Seattle Sounders to make room for West German international Horst Koeppel, who was acquired two weeks ago.

Koeppel, who has seen limited action in two games since joining the club, is expected to move into the starting lineup for the Whitecaps Thursday when they play at Dallas.

The club also announced that assistant playing-coach Holger Osieck will not make the trip to Dallas. His spot in the lineup will be taken by newly-signed John Waddington.

And in Tampa, Fla., coach John Boyle, the versatile midfielder who helped lead Tampa Bay Rowdies to the NASL championship in 1975, was reactivated as a player.

Manager Beau Rogers said the Rowdies were taking the precaution of reactivating Boyle because Derek Smethurst and Rodney Marsh will be benched for a single game for disciplinary reasons.

Crippled Courageous 'Still Smoking'

NEWPORT, R.I. (UPI) — A broken head stay crippled the yacht Courageous on the second leg of an America's Cup trial race Tuesday, but skipper Ted Turner refused to admit his luck has changed.

"We're still in there smokin', pal," the fiesty Atlanta Braves owner said as his million-dollar sailing machine was towed back to Newport Harbor.

Courageous was 12 seconds ahead of west-coast challenger Enterprise at the second mark of a six-leg race when she suddenly turned into the wind and let her sails flap. Race officials fired three gunshots, halting competition.

Because the head stay holds up the mast and holds down the jib, Courageous crewmen scrambled to ease pressure on the jib and prevent the mast from falling down. That would have been a $50,000 setback.

Turner said quick action averted the need for major repairs. He is ordering new parts from a Middletown, R.I. naval supply firm.

At the start of the week, Turner and Courageous had a clear edge for the honor of defending yachting's most pretigious prize against a foreign challenger in September.

An impressive 11-1 record was whittled to 10-2 Monday when the New York Yacht Club ruled in favor of Enterpise skipper Lowell North on a challenge.

"America's Cup racing is sort of like World War I," Turner told reporters after Tuesday's mishap, "after the initial six months, it settled into a series of trench battles where progress is measured in hundreds of yards.

"That's how it is here, seconds apart," he said. "This has to be some of the closest sailb6at racing—and undoubtedly the toughest—ever done around here."

If Courageous is ready for competition today she again will face Enterprise.

Barlow Shares Berlin Triumph

WEST BERLIN (CP) — Nicole Marois of Quebec City and Wendy Barlow of Victoria have won the doubles title at an invitational junior tennis tournament for competitors under 18.

Miss Marois, the Canadian junior champion, and Miss Barlow combined to defeat Jacobsson and Sanden of Sweden 2-6, 6-4, 6-4 in the final.

In women's singles, Miss Marois lost in the quarter-finals to Erven of the Netherlands, 6-3, 0-6, 6-2. Miss Barlow was eliminated in the quarter-finals 6-2, 4-6, 6-1 by Mansson of Sweden, the eventual winner.

The Canadians will next compete in a tournament in the Netherlands, then go to Hamburg, West Germany.

Victoria Archer Finishes Second

TORONTO (CP) — Bill Fordham of Mississauga, Ont., one of a small number of professional archers in Canada, won the pro competition Tuesday at the Canadian archery championships with a score of 598 of a possible 600 points.

Fordham, who said he joined the professional ranks because "the amateur equipment was antiquated," expressed disappointment with his score.

"I was pleased with my shooting today, but I'm really disappointed about missing a perfect round. I was so close."

In the amateur division, Roger Lemay of Boisbriand, Que., took first with a total of 1,158 of a possible 1,200 points. Lemay was awarded the victory after Ron Lippert of Toronto finished on top, but was disqualified for failing to check his equipment with the judges.

The disqualification was particularly discouraging for Lippert who was trying to stage a comeback after failing to make the Canadian Olympic team last year.

"I needed this victory to satisfy myself," he said. "After the Olympic trials, I was totally disheartened. People expected me to quit altogether, but I had to come back. I had to show them and myself I could still shoot."

Lucille Lemay of Boisbriand won the women's target competition with a score of 2,298 out of 2,400. Gerri Cosgrove of Victoria, who set three Canadian records Monday in winning the 1,200 event, was second with 2,255.

NANAIMO ELIMINATES ALBERNI

LAKE COWICHAN — Nanaimo nudged Alberni Valley 5-4 in an extra inning to stay alive in the Vancouver Island Senior Babe Ruth baseball championship tournament here Tuesday.

The win moved Nanaimo into tonight's semi-final against Comox Valley and the winner will meet unbeaten Victoria Firefighters on Thursday. If Nanaimo wins Thursday an extra game will be played Friday.

Sooke Advances To West Final

Sooke Tomic Lures advanced to the Western Canadian midget boys' (15-16) softball championship in Wetaskiwin, Alta., July 30-Aug. 1, by winning the six-team provincial tournament in Sooke Athletic Park at the weekend.

Sooke topped Abbotsford 2-0 in the final of the B.C. tourney and two players, Brian Rumsby and Mike Moss, were named the top pitcher and batter, respectively.

Don Threlfall of Abbotsford was picked as the most valuable player.

Lecuyer Guilty

STONY PLAIN, Alta. (CP) — Tony Lecuyer, a forward with Spruce Grove Mets, was found guilty in provincial court Tuesday of assault causing bodily harm in an off-ice fight following an Alberta Junior Hockey League game at nearby Spruce Grove last Oct. 15. He will be sentenced July 28.

Brent Gogol of Pincher Creek Panthers received a cut in the thigh after being kicked by someone wearing ice skates.

Lecuyer, in his last year with the junior A league, was suspended from playing with league teams after the incident. An Alberta supreme court judge turned down his application in February to have the suspension lifted.

Seed Catalog Can Be Helpful

Knowing the different types of annual bedding plants is as important to gardeners as knowing the kinds.

If that makes little sense, here is an example. Suppose you want to fill a flat open bed with petunias for color all summer. You buy a few flats of petunia plants in May, and put them out into the bed.

They grow well enough with adequate watering but they just don't look right. Stems are lying around, the leaves are rather thin and flowers are slow to come and rather small when finally they appear.

What you had in mind were well rounded low mounds of good green foliage covered with a succession of medium size petunia flowers, of either red, white or pink.

The plants you have may belong to the open pollinated type with small flowers, or to one of the balcony or trailing types. Probably the ones you wanted belong to the hybrid multiflora type. These have many flowers of medium size on dwarf dark green mounded foliage.

Hybrid Grandiflora petunias have enormous flowers, fewer of them, and sometimes the stems tend to sprawl with the size of the blooms. The foliage seems sparse in proportion to the size of bloom.

The best strain of mound-like hybrid multifloras has been the "Satins"—Pink Satin, Red Satin, White Satin and most notable of all, Coral Satin.

Although listed as reaching 15 inch height, Coral Satin seldom was more than nine inches here in open bed plantings. It became top favorite with gardeners wanting petunias in constant bloom from the end of May to the end of September.

An even greater range of heights and habits are found among the snapdragons, so it pays to have a seed catalog on hand to know what is available, and to record the names to look for. While all those listed will not be found at a single local retail plant outlet, an assortment of heights is to be expected.

Magic Carpet is a six-inch dwarf. Other dwarfs are up to 12 inches. Next there is a wind-resistant strain called Carrioca. Although up to 20-inch heights, with base branching habit, these need no staking.

All normal snapdragon colors are grown in each named strain, also mixtures of colors.

The Rocket strain was developed especially for outdoor growing, and their height of 36 inches makes them of great value both for garden decoration and for cut flowers.

Two newer strains of snapdragons are novelties, but well worth growing. First out 10 years ago is Bright Butterflies. The flowers are roundish, flat and open faced, with a wavy edge in their separate colors I found them all quite charming, in the garden and as cut flowers. A still newer strain is called Madame Butterfly, a double form that is to me less attractive.

You can see that when petunias are shown with a label saying "Petunias, multifloras" — if you don't know a multiflora from a grandiflora or a balcony type, you are hardly likely to get just what you want. And with self-service (to save you paying more), there is only a slight chance of being able to locate someone with the information you need.

Do some reading this summer of not only seed catalogs but of library books on summer flowering annuals. You will soon pick up enough information to help you choose the exact bedding plants you want for your garden next spring.

HOW TO WRITE

A GOOD

CLASSIFIED ACTION AD

1—IT'S BEST to start your ad with the name of the article or service you have to offer. If you have an apartment, room etc., for rent, or property for sale: start your ad with the location.

2—BE CLEAR. Readers respond more quickly and favorably when given complete, definite information. Always include the price in your advertisement.

3—MAKE IT EASY for the reader-prospect to reach you. Always give your telephone number or your name and address. If you do not have regular hours, state a preferred time for the prospect to get in touch with you.

4—PLAY SAFE. You get the greatest reader attention by using consecutive insertions. A six-day order is best and costs less, and you can, of course, stop your ad as soon as you get the results you want. You pay only for the days your ad appeared. Lower yearly rates are available to those who wish to keep their services or products before the public.

5—PLACE YOURSELF in the reader's position and ask yourself what you want to know about your offer. The answer you give will make a good Want Ad.

6—GIVE YOUR PROSPECT every inducement you can with good copy. Classified action ad readers have the money and are already interested in buying the merchandise or service you have to offer; the details and information you give are the most important.

7—TO PLACE YOUR AD, call 386-2121, your direct line number to fast Want Ad action. A courteous, efficient advisor will be glad to help you word and place your order. And remember, Classified Action Ads afford you the most complete coverage. Telephones are open 8:00 a.m. to 6:00 p.m. for you daily, Monday through Saturday calls. Don't allow the reader to speculate.

Scattering sunshine all along the way;
You know how we loved you and yes, love you yet,
Though God took you from us we canot forget.
Your daughter Fran, and Gord and family.

Second Trustee Pullout

A second southern Vancouver Island school district is considering pulling out of the B.C. School Trustees Association because of high dues.

Sooke trustees Tuesday discussed the possibility of following Greater Victoria's intention to leave.

Business committee chairman Brian Killip suggested the board at its budget meetings discuss whether it wishes to pay the increased membership dues.

Greater Victoria announced in May it will withdraw from the association next year because of a more than 20 per cent increase in dues.

Sooke trustees learned their fees had risen to $20,565.

Killip suggested the district could hire another teacher or pay for an important service for that amount of money.

Legal Services Expansion

A $35,000 grant from the federal justice department to the Law Centre will allow the extension of legal services to rural areas of Greater Victoria outside the urban core, a spokesman for the centre said Tuesday.

The Law Centre's project, submitted under the title South Vancouver Island Legal Services, was one of seven receiving a total of $221,767 under the federal government's legal aid program for experiments and research work.

Neil Gold, a University of Victoria law professor and director of the Law Centre, said the intention is to provide legal advice, representation and information to residents outside the four core municipalities.

He said specific areas of operation have yet to be decided, but the services will probably be provided in the Langford, Colwood, Metchosin, Sooke and Glen Lake areas, and there was a possibility that the northern part of the Saanich Peninsula and the Gulf Islands would also be included.

Gold said the program will emphasize public legal education and attempt to bring together groups with common problems.

The grant should provide for two full-time legal information counsellors, Gold said, although it may be on a year-to-year basis initially.

In the next four to six weeks a planning group will define the program in more detail and begin hiring personnel.

Uhlman Eyes B.C. Offer On Skagit

SEATTLE (AP) — Mayor Wes Uhlman's office plans to complete an analysis this week of a British Columbia offer that would make unnecessary the raising of Ross Dam on the Skagit River.

Increasing the dam's height by 122 feet would result in the flooding of 5,000 acres of the Skagit Valley in B.C.

Uhlman's office wants to have a recommendation prepared in time for the Seattle city council meeting on Monday, according to Tim Hillard, the mayor's spokesman.

Such a recommendation would come a week after the council voted unanimously to accept a federal power commission licence to increase the height of the dam to generate more power.

An ordinance to that effect was read for the first time last Monday, and is up for final consideration next Monday.

Accepting the power commission licence allows the city either to raise the dam or negotiate for an equivalent amount of power from B.C.

Premier Davis Off to Japan

TORONTO (CP) — Premier William Davis, two of his cabinet ministers and representatives of Ontario tourism, manufacturing and agricultural industries will travel to Japan Sept. 22 for two weeks, it was announced Tuesday. The trip is a job-creating mission, Davis said in a statement. Davis is scheduled to make two major speeches to Japanese businessmen. He also will speak to Canadian business representatives and hold private meetings with industrialists, investors and government officials.

Arab Sheiks Forced To Line Up for Gas

NICOSIA, Cyprus (AP) — When an Arab sheik pulls into a gasoline station in the Persian Gulf emirate of Dubai, he is likely to be driving a big gasguzzler.

But he may have to wait in line for a half-hour because of a shortage either of gasoline or of station attendants. He may have to pump his own gas by hand because of frequent blackouts, pay United States prices to fill up his tank and buy imported motor oil.

Residents of the Persian Gulf states, which produce nearly one-third of the world's petroleum, are largely indifferent to energy conservation. But some of them have more trouble getting their fuel than many consumers in Western countries where oil is less plentiful.

The reason for this anomaly is that the Gulf states export more than 95 per cent of their petroleum, finding out only recently how much they need of it themselves.

With thousands of big foreign cars being imported every year and booming economic development putting a strain on power sources, fuel shortages and blackouts are common in the Gulf.

But few seem seriously bothered. "Nobody worries about energy in the Gulf," says a resident of Dubai. "Most local Arabs have two large American cars that use a gallon every 12 miles."

Despite daily power blackouts from overloaded electric stations, many foreign workers get their electricity bills paid by their companies and think nothing of leaving on a month-long vacation without switching off their air conditioners.

In most Arab oil-producing countries, the price of domestic gasoline and oil is subsidized and therefore cheap. A gallon of gasoline in Saudi Arabia costs 13 cents, in Kuwait, 15 cents.

But in poorer oil-producing states such as the northern emirates on the Persian Gulf, gas prices are not subsidized, and it costs an average of 68 cents a gallon. Only one of the seven United Arab emirates, Abu Dhabi, has its own refineries. The others import all their refined fuels.

Dubai, which produces more than 100 million barrels of crude oil a year, has to import nearly two million barrels of refined oil for its local needs.

Qatar imports its refined oil and gasoline from European and other foreign refineries. Because of the increasing cost of supporting oil prices, Qatar is having second thoughts about its subsidy program.

But most Middle East oil-producing countries subsidize and do not tax motor fuel.

"Oil is a social service in the Gulf countries," said a foreign oil company executive. "Economics don't come into it. Their philosophy is: How can we charge for it when it's coming out of the ground?"

Periodic shortages of gasoline and motor oil in the Gulf come from distribution problems and are neither permanent nor serious. The big energy crisis in the Arab countries comes from a lack of power facilities.

Blackouts are particularly common in the Gulf during the summer when air conditioners are going constantly, more than doubling the power load in homes and offices.

The small emirate of Sharjah, where the temperature tops 100 and the humidity is more than 90 per cent, is experiencing eight-hour-long power cuts. This means one district has no electricity one day, and another area suffers the next day.

Even Iran, blessed with water to run hydroelectric power stations, has launched a public campaign to save energy.

Iranian state television and radio regularly urge citizens not to run their appliances in peakload hours. Factories have eliminated one of three shifts, shops close early and the clocks have been turned back an hour to reduce daytime.

The wealthy oil producing states also subsidize the price of electricity, but because of the heavy load on power facilities and the failure of public appeals to cut waste, some governments are raising electricity prices.

Dubai has announced it is dropping its subsidy for electricity, which cost the state $25 million last year and would have gone up to $35 million this year. The new measure means the average family's electricity bill jumps from $50 a month to $200.

Almost all electric power in the Gulf is fuelled by gasoline.

The lack of concern about saving energy in the Gulf states is not just mindless extravagance. The humidity is so thick it can produce a heavy growth of mildew within days without air conditioning.

And the taste of big gas-thirsty cars is not just a matter of prestige but of comfort. The big cars have the best air conditioners, and Arabs like to take their entire family along when they go on outings.

Bush Pilot Goal Of Woman, 22

NESTOR FALLS, Ont. (CP) — Twenty-two-year-old Janet Keogh says she is determined to become a bush pilot.

She has her commercial pilot's licence, has been hired by North Western Flying Services in this town, 60 miles south of Kenora, and has gained the acceptance of the other pilots. But the final test is whether she will be accepted by the male sportsmen who hire planes to fly them into fishing and hunting camps.

Miss Keogh, born and raised near Picton, Ont., is not the first commercial woman pilot, but she still is a rarity.

She took kinesiology at University of Waterloo and two years ago worked for the summer at a fly-in resort about 40 miles east of here. She said she realized she was in a world where the airplane was the major transportation method and part of a way of life.

"I've always liked to fly but I never figured it as a career because you never hear of women commercial pilots," Miss Keogh said.

Instead of going back to university in the fall, she started taking flying lessons in Picton.

She returned to the resort in the spring as a cook. She had her private pilot's licence and when she wasn't working, the owner allowed her to fly in supplies so she could accumulate flying time.

This spring she received her commercial pilot's licence and she and her fiance returned to northwestern Ontario to get jobs as pilots.

Heat's Still On in U.S. With No Relief in Sight

Times News Services

The U.S. heat wave shows no sign of cooling off, and since nobody can do anything about the weather, the only course is to cope.

On Tuesday, 18 cities from the muggy Midwest to the steaming streets of the East set or broke record temperatures. The mercury reached 34 degrees Celsius at International Falls, Minn., 36 at Traverse City, Mich., and 37 at Providence, R.I.

Portland, Maine, had the lowest reading among those setting records, 33. New York had the highest, 39.

People used a variety of ways — practical and fanciful — to make do in the relentless heat.

In Denver, for instance, one disc jockey played "Jingle Bells" to cool off listeners as temperatures rose beyond the 32-degree mark for the 14th day this month.

In New York, on a more practical level, authorities declared a water alert because of the number of open fire hydrants. They banned around-the-clock lawn watering, home car washing and sidewalk spraying.

In Craig, Colo., Bureau of Land Management officials ordered the trapping of wild horses threatened by a lack of water. They hoped to truck the mustangs to Wyoming, where water is plentiful.

In Chicago, a half million persons flocked to the city's 31 beaches. In Minneapolis, Northern States Power Co. reported its second straight day of record demand Tuesday. An energy alert also was in effect for portions of Minnesota, Wisconsin and North and South Dakota.

State and federal officials began providing assistance to Vermont dairy farmers caught up in the second drought to hit the state in three years. Some dairymen moved their cows into barns and began feeding them hay intended for the coming winter.

In Davenport, Iowa, a young mother watched her four children — ages two to 10 — drown in the Mississippi River as they sought relief from the heat. Ruth Triplett, 27, who cannot swim, was helpless.

And in St. Louis officials blamed the heat for the deaths of nine persons in the last two days. Four elderly people from the same apartment building died on Monday. On Tuesday five other deaths in the area were attributed to the heat wave.

The hot weather that has been hovering over a 2,000-mile belt from the Atlantic coast to the Rockies for the last eight days — and longer in some places — was not expected to let up until the weekend at the earliest.

Weathermen blamed an unusually strong, long-lasting and slow-moving ridge of high pressure for the heat.

Unlike the past winter when cold winds flowed farther south than usual, the current ridge is deflecting storm-bearing winds much farther north than normal.

"The storms have just been too far north . . . to bring us relief from periodic cold air masses," said Robert Dickson, deputy director of the National Weather Service's long-range forecast office in Washington. "The major storms have been passing through the southern part of Hudson's Bay."

Hanoi's Claim 'Absurd'

WASHINGTON (WP) — Former U.S. Secretary of State Henry Kissinger Tuesday called it "an absurdity" for Vietnam to claim the United States is still bound by a 1973 proposal to give it billions of dollars in postwar reconstruction aid.

"We owe them nothing," Kissinger tool a House subcommittee, because "they systematically violated" the Jan. 27, 1973, cease-fire agreement between what was then North and South Vietnam "from practically the first day."

Kissinger said he did not want "to second-guess" his successor, Cyrus Vance, over the Carter administration decision to now support unified Communist Vietnam's admission to the United Nations. But he said "we wanted to make it more conditional" on an accounting of U.S. servicemen missing in South Vietnam.

U.S. Inflation to Decrease But Price Rise Forecast

WASHINGTON (AP) — Unemployment and inflation will decrease in the United States next year, although prices still might rise as much as 6.5 per cent, congressional budget experts said today.

The Congressional Budget Office said members of Congress, writing a federal budget for the 1978 fiscal year, must conclude that "the realistic outlook is for no more than a slow unwinding of the current rate of inflation."

In testimony prepared for the Senate budget committee, budget office director Alice Rivlin said inflation might be held to between 4.5 and 6.5 per cent if increases in food prices do not exceed 6.5 per cent.

The government's most-recent figures show an annual inflation rate of 7.2 per cent for this year.

Mrs. Rivlin appeared to minimize the chance of reducing inflation by cutting federal spending.

A spending policy tight enough to cut the inflation rate one percentage point would throw one million U.S. citizens out of work and raise the unemployment rate, currently 7.1 per cent of the labor force, by 1.2 percentage points, she said.

As the committee began work on writing a budget for the 12 months beginning Oct. 1, Mrs. Rivlin presented these forecasts:

—Growth in the economy, as measured by the gross national product: an increase of five to six per cent from the last quarter of 1976 through the last quarter of 1977, and a rise of 3.6 to 5.1 per cent in 1978.

—Unemployment: 6.6 to 7.2 per cent by the fourth quarter of 1977 and 5.9 to 6.9 per cent by the end of 1978.

—Inflation, as measured by the consumer price index: up six to seven per cent in 1977 and 4.5 to 6.5 per cent by the end of 1978.

Newton in Court

OAKLAND, Calif. (UPI) — Former Black Panther leader Huey Newton, who says he returned to the United States to clear his name, has pleaded innocent to charges of murdering a teen-aged girl and assaulting a tailor in 1974.

He entered his plea at his arraignment Tuesday before Municipal Judge Courtland Arne, who refused to release him without bail.

But Arne did reduce Newton's total bail from $100,000 to $80,000, and set a preliminary hearing for Sept. 14.

Newton jumped $50,000 bail in 1974 and fled to Cuba, charging that he could not get a fair trial in the United States.

Manitoba Twister Damage at $500,000

DOWNTOWN digs are hard to find for urban-type gulls, but this couple have taken a stork-like stance and nested on a chimney pot at St. Andrew's Presbyterian kirk on Douglas. Junior seems happy enough in his high-rise milieu, and compared to the rigors and hazards of off-shore nesting, he's safe as churches. (Bill Halkett photo)

ROSA, Man. (CP) — Municipal officials estimated on Tuesday there was approximately $500,000 damage from a tornado that struck this southern Manitoba town Monday night, killing two persons and injuring two others.

A spokesman for Emergency Measures Organization (EMO) gave the damage figures as a general assessment after officials made a tour of the 35 square miles affected by the high winds, rainfall and hail.

The twister took the lives of Mike Klem, 72, and his wife Katie, 58. Their daughter Joanne Grenier, 22, and her 14-month-old daughter Tara are in critical condition in hospital.

The twister, which hit about 8 p.m. Monday, lifted the Klems' house off its foundations and slammed it down several hundred yards away. It also uprooted utility poles and flattened crops.

The winds, estimated as high as 320 km.p.h., were followed by heavy rainfall and hail that one eyewitness called "as big as chicken eggs".

Three farmsteads, including buildings and machinery, were devastated. Three horses and four head of cattle were found dead. Half a dozen others were missing, but may have just wandered away into bushland.

Melvin and Trudy Schlorff had spent all last winter restoring a farmhouse near St. Malo, Man., and had planned to move in later this week. But on Tuesday their dream was in ruins.

"I can't believe it," Schlorff said. "There was a beautiful grove of about 140 birch trees and a 70-year-old home. The whole thing was just a picture postcard."

Ken Walters recalled hearing a roar "like about five jets" when the twister struck, taking with it the roof of his barn, three garages and some of his pasture land near Rosa.

Meanwhile, Manitoba EMO deputy director Nels Stavenjord said there are plans to set up a system to spot tornados and other potentially dangerous weather conditions. Preparations began this summer and the system should be operating by winter.

However, Stavenjord said even with such a system, it would have been impossible to warn residents of Rosa, 50 miles south of Winnipeg, about the twister that hit their town.

"From what I can gather from the weather people, it just appeared out of the blue, from a big black cloud. Then it just dissipated. I don't see how people could have been warned."

Stavenjord said the Manitoba system will rely extensively on the communications network of the RCMP, and will include the co-operation of government agencies, weather offices and volunteers.

Ken Seal, deputy director of operations for the U.S. National Weather Office in Bismarck, N.D., said volunteers have long been an important part of tornado warnings in that border state.

"There's absolutely no doubt in my mind that our system of tornado watching has saved lives," Seal said in an interview. "I'm surprised that no such system exists in Canada."

The last severe torando in Manitoba was in 1968, when three persons were injured in the Pembina Hills, east of Pilot Mound. The last death in Manitoba attributed to a tornado was July 17, 1958, when a man lost control of his car and crashed into a ditch.

Washington, Oregon & Idaho.

The great green adventure land on your doorstep.

Just across the border is some of the most exciting holiday country anywhere, from evergreen forest to open seacoast, metropolis to magnificent mountain range. There are many points of entry...but suppose we begin by following Highway 5, south of Vancouver.

It's less than 3 hours driving time to Seattle, where you'll enjoy attractions like the Space Needle, the monorail and the new Kingdome. From here, a short side-trip takes you to the mountain forests and alpine meadows of the rugged Cascade Range. But for a grand "circle tour", continue on Highway 5 through southwest Washington...crossing the Columbia River to Portland, "the City of Roses" and Oregon's major centre.

After shopping and sightseeing in Portland, swing west to Astoria and follow the spectacular Oregon Coast Highway route 101, over 400 miles past broad sandy beaches and rocky headlands. Fabulous for fishing, clam digging, beachcombing and savoring the clear sea air. Then head east to the Oregon interior, pausing at Crater Lake before continuing on to southwest Oregon, a totally different landscape that's a mecca for rockhounds.

Turning north, you'll enter the Oregon Trail country, land of round-ups ghost towns and cattle ranches. To the east is Idaho—a state of scenic surprise.

Entering southern Idaho, you can visit the state capital of Boise...then loop southeast and view breathtaking Shoshone Falls on the Snake River (it's higher than Niagara). To the north is Craters of the Moon National Monument, an incredible "moonscape" of volcanic origin, while just beyond here is the famous year-round resort centre of Sun Valley.

On the northbound leg of your "circle", be sure to see Hell's Canyon on the Snake River, North America's deepest river gorge. Then visit the Emerald Empire of northern Idaho before crossing the state line back into Washington. From Spokane, site of Expo 74, you can plan the final portion of your tour: west past Grand Coulee Dam and across the Cascades to the Coast...north across the border to the Kootenays, or northwest into B.C.'s Okanagan region.

We can help you see it all! It's a whale of a trip, but even then you haven't seen the half of it. Still remaining are other vast scenic stretches, including Washington's Olympic Peninsula, Oregon's Columbia River gorge and the delightful recreational area of eastern Idaho. How to begin? WATCH IT BUSTER WITH THE CLUSTER

By PAUL MOSS
Times Staff

Criticizing Victoria's cluster lights is akin to attacking motherhood, apple pie and the flag.

But city engineer John Sansom goes further than mere criticism of the lights' feeble illuminating qualities.

He's suggesting they be switched off, except during the tourist season and at Christmas.

Sansom's recommendation, which seems likely to cause some high-voltage static — particularly from the business community — will be discussed by city council's public works committee on Thursday.

He says in his report that a reduction in the use of cluster lights is justified because they are "for ornamental use only and contribute very little to the lighting function."

"They do, however, contribute to the image of the city and their use could be confined to the tourist and Christmas seasons," he concedes.

He estimates that the capital cost of providing separate circuits would be about $60,000, but the city would save about $11,000 a year in energy costs at current rates.

The city's street lighting budget this year is around $220,000. In its closed budget sessions earlier this year, council expressed alarm at B.C. Hydro's prediction of a 16 per cent increase annually, and asked Sansom to investigate possible savings.

But the city's engineer's report says that, apart from the cluster lights, there's nothing to be gained by cutting back on the street lighting program. Quite the contrary, that would lead to more traffic accidents and hinder crime prevention.

Sansom concludes that the only significant cost saving would come through converting the street lighting system from mercury vapor to the sodium vapor type, which are twice as efficient.

The capital cost involved would be about $500,000 but the city would save about $80,000 a year on its electricity bill, he says.

Common Place . . . Too Mundane

Kasapi Construction Co. doesn't like common place names and neither does Saanich council.

In a letter tabled at a meeting of the lands, planning and housing committee Tuesday night, the company asked that Common Place, a new street off Dawnview Crescent in Gordon Head, be renamed.

The company wanted something "a little more distinguished," a spokesman said . . . something "a little less mundane."

The company suggested Galaxyview Place.

Committee members agreed Common Place was, well, common place, and voted unanimously to make the change.

But on a recommendation from municipal planner Gil Laurenson the committee approved a shortened version.

Henceforth Common Place will be known as Galaxy Place.

As one spectator quipped, Far Out.

CRTC Report Faults CBC

COLD COMFORT to problems of an east coast heat wave which saw temperatures reaching the 38 celsius (100F) mark Tuesday is taken by Newark, N.J. ice company driver Les Jones as he waits for his truck to be loaded. See U.S. weather story on Page 55.

OTTAWA (CP) — The Canadian Radio-television and Telecommunications Commission (CRTC) has unanimously endorsed a report recommending that a comprehensive inquiry be held into broadcasting and cultural affairs, CRTC sources said Tuesday.

They added that the report, written by the CRTC's special committee investigating the CBC, also faults the CBC for not living up to its legal mandate of contributing to the development of national unity.

But the report, to be tabled in the Commons today by Prime Minister Trudeau, does not place any of the blame on individual employees of Radio-Canada, the CBC's French-language division.

The inquiry into the CBC was called in mid-March at Trudeau's request after some top Liberals had accused Radio-Canada of being riddled with pro-separatists who were distorting the news.

The report recommends that an intensive inquiry be held into the administration of both private and public broadcasting, as well as the administration of cultural affairs matters, sources said.

But the report says that the inquiry does not necessarily have to be a royal commission and does not have to be held immediately.

The recommendations, endorsed by all CRTC commissioners, dampens recent speculation that a royal commission into broadcasting will be called soon, a move that had been favored by CRTC chairman Harry Boyle, CBC president Al Johnson and Secretary of State John Roberts, who is responsible for the CBC.

CRTC sources also said Tuesday that Boyle, who has been with the CRTC in various capacities since it started in 1968, plans to resign. They said Boyle will not announce his future plans until later because he said he does not want to upstage the CRTC report.

Communications Minister Jeanne Sauve, responsible for the CRTC, said she favors examination of broadcasting in the light of technological developments, but she does not believe a royal commission is needed.

The CRTC made its recommendation after Trudeau asked it to say whether a royal commission into broadcasting was warranted.

Trudeau also had asked whether the CBC deserved the criticism that it was not fulfilling its mandates.

Sources say the report concludes that the CBC has failed to contribute to the development of national unity. But unlike other critics, the CRTC blames the CBC's structure and priorities rather than groups of CBC employees, sources said.

They said the report faults the CBC for creating its own two solitudes—the English and French-language divisions.

The report also faults the CBC for not doing more to foster regional radio and television production.

ICBC Claim Filed After Car Sold

The Insurance Corp. of B.C. paid out a claim to Surrey Dodge Ltd., the former company of Socred George Kerster, on a car which had been sold before the claim was even made, the opposition revealed Tuesday.

Dennis Cocke (NDP—New Westminster) tabled a document in the legislature Tuesday which revealed that the controversial claim was registered with ICBC by Surrey Dodge on March 25, 1976, but that the car the claim was made on had been sold two weeks earlier.

Education Minister Pat McGeer, in charge of ICBC, said he would attempt to solve the puzzle later.

Earlier documents tabled in the legislature revealed that:

—The claims committee of ICBC, the ultimate decision-making body on whether to pay out disputed claims, went against the recommendation of ICBC adjusters in paying out the Surrey Dodge claim;

—Kerster phoned Vettese in June, 1976, about the Surrey Dodge claim and that he also discussed it during a visit to ICBC general manager Norman Bortnick's office in August, 1976, while there on another matter.

The purpose of the Vettese letter tabled by Cocke was to advise Surrey Dodge that there were definite problems with the claim.

The tabling of the document was the latest step in a week-long attempt by the opposition to prove that Kerster interfered in payment of the claim to Surrey Dodge, which he headed until shortly after his election to the legislature in December, 1975.

The letter tabled by Cocke was sent April 14, 1976, to Surrey Dodge from Derek Vettese, claims supervisor of the Surrey claims centre.

In the letter, Vettese goes over some of the history of the case, saying that although a 1969 Mustang was stolen from the Surrey Dodge lot June 25, 1975, the claim was not made with ICBC until nine months later on March 25, 1976.

LIQUOR SALES HIT $448.3M

Liquor sales increased almost $60 million to $448.3 million in B.C. during the fiscal year ended March 31, 1976.

The government has since declared an intention to promote moderation in consumption of alcoholic beverages.

The B.C. Liquor Administration Branch annual report, tabled in the legislature Tuesday, showed that income transferred by the branch to the government was $149.7 million, up from $120.3 million the previous year.

Sale of Canadian liquor continued to be the major revenue source, rising to $185.8 million from $162 million. B.C. wines generated sales totalling $38.1 million, compared with $32.2 million the year before. Imported wines brought $28.3 million in sales, up from $19 million.

Health Minister Bob McClelland said last week the government intends to use profits from the sale of alcohol to conduct a major advertising campaign aimed at making liquor ads less glamorous.

Tougher UIC Passes 134-17

OTTAWA (CP) — Legislation the Liberals promised in the 1974 general election to cut cheaters and loafers off unemployment insurance benefits finally was passed Tuesday by the Commons.

The bill, increasing the time a person must work to be eligible for benefits and reducing the amount of time a person can get benefits, passed 134 to 17.

The Liberals had the support of 35 Progressive Conservative MPs. Ten New Democrats, five Social Credit MPs, independent Leonard Jones (Moncton) and Robert Muir (PC)—Cape Breton-The Sydneys) voted against it.

Earlier, the government with Conservative help beat back 130 to 16 an NDP motion to delay the final vote for six months, a move which would have effectively killed the legislation.

Manpower Minister Bud Cullen has said at least 50,000 people could be removed from the unemployment insurance rolls by the legislation.

Conservative opposition to the legislation dwindled after Cullen altered the original bill's provision requiring 12 weeks work for benefit eligibility. Eight weeks work now is required to get benefits.

He replaced the controversial provision with a requirement of 10 weeks to 14 weeks of work, depending on unemployment in a region, to be eligible for benefits.

The bill also sets a range of 10 weeks to 50 weeks of benefits based on a formula which includes regional unemployment and the number of weeks worked.

McKELVEY RESIGNS $1,625 JOB

Michael McKelvey has quit his $1,625-a-month job as executive assistant to Transport and Communications Minister Jack Davis, his father-in-law.

Premier Bill Bennett Monday told all ministers to get their close relatives off the public payroll.

Davis said Tuesday McKelvey sent him a letter of resignation last week — effective Monday — but will continue to work out of the minister's office in an unpaid capacity until he has completed a couple of projects.

Security Council Okays Vietnam

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — The Security Council today unanimously recommended Vietnam for United Nations membership.

The council's action, made possible when the United States ended its opposition to Vietnamese membership, was a prerequisite for final approval of Vietnamese membership at the next session of the General Assembly Sept. 20.

Vietnam and the already recommended African state of Djibouti will be the 148th and 149th UN members.

Flood Wreaks Havoc On Johnstown Again

Times News Services

JOHNSTOWN, PA. — Ten feet of water today engulfed this city which has become synonymous with U.S. flood disasters, chasing thousands from their homes and spreading death and widespread destruction through surrounding valleys.

By mid-day, five deaths had been reported and rescuers were snatching the stranded from trees and rooftops.

Many more were reported missing in the seven counties surrounding Johnstown which was devastated by floodwaters in 1889 with a death toll of 2,200.

Rivers and creeks gorged by a sudden overnight deluge of up to 10 inches of rain swept cars, houses and businesses along in the gush of water that reached 10 feet in some areas.

The city was isolated except to the helicopters that were rushed to aid the rescue effort.

Scattered looting was reported and a "shoot to kill" order was issued to the police. National Guardsmen were called to aid the rescue effort.

Mayor Herb Pfuhl estimated damage in Johnstown alone would exceed $100 million.

A huge Bethlehem Steel plant stretching seven miles along the Conemaugh River was extensively damaged.

Whole communities, including 15,000 residents in nearby Windber, were isolated as the flash flood blocked highways and knocked out communications.

"People are on the rooftops and in trees. They're everywhere as we understand it," said Elmer Shank, deputy Cambria County civil defence director.

"Our main problem now is getting them out."

Two National Guard battalions were called out to help evacuate people stranded in their homes.

Robert John, a reporter for the Johnstown Tribune-Democrat, said thousands fled to high ground overlooking the city of 42,000, situated in a valley in the Allegheny Mountains where the Conemaugh and the Stonycreek Rivers converge about 55 miles east of Pittsburgh.

The heavy rain fell for four or five hours Tuesday night during a series of storms that struck without warning. Minor flooding was first reported. Then the streams began overflowing in torrents, sweeping aside homes like matchsticks.

"Nobody was prepared for it," John said. "The weather forecast had no way indicated the storm of this extent. With these hills the more it rained the more it became frightening.

"Cars were washed down streams people began leaving their homes early this morning as the flood waters began to rise.

Russian Bought Secrets

OTTAWA (CP) — Police disclosed today that a Soviet military official who left Canada this month was the object of a 16-month investigation during which he purchased documents from a research scientist.

An RCMP spokesman said that Lt.-Cmdr. Valerie Smirov, an assistant military attache, paid expense money and a small gratuity to a research scientist.

The documents were of non-classified and industrial technology.

Other sources said that the scientist in question worked at the Bell Northern Research facility here and that while the material concerned is not now classified it could have been in the future as research progressed.

Police Sift Killing Clues

CHILLIWACK (CP) — RCMP officials now believe all evidence at the scene of Monday night's shooting incident near here has been found and hope to wrap up scientific examination and searches of the area later today.

At least two and possibly four area teenagers were gunned down by a long-haired stranger Monday night and police are continuing their search for two of the missing youths and for the suspect.

Sergeant Dave McLay of Agassiz RCMP detachment said police have asked the public to report to the nearest police detachment any information they may have concerning a possible suspect in the slayings or on the whereabouts of the two still missing.

Meanwhile, police divers were continuing their search of the Fraser River after finding the bodies of Evert Den Hertog, 19, of Rosedale and Bert Menger, 19, of Clearbrook on Tuesday.

Still missing were Den Hertog's brother John, 16, and Leola Corrine Culiker, 15, also of Rosedale.

The bodies were recovered from the river at points near the riverside park, 10 miles east of this Fraser Valley community, where the shootings took place.

Menger's brother, Ed, 15, was the only survivor, and the only known witness to the shooting.

"We really don't know what we have here," an RCMP spokesman said. "We don't know if we have a maniac on the loose or what—we don't know."

Autopsies had not been performed Tuesday night, but coroner Dr. A. D. Colledge said Evert Den Hertog had been shot in the right shoulder with the bullet crossing his chest and also had been stabbed six times in the chest.

Suicide Stemmed from Jealousy—Police

Emotional strain caused by jealousy in a lovers' triangle was responsible for the suicide of 32-year-old Wayne Gundrum on June 2, Saanich police said Tuesday.

Insp. Robin Stewart said the department has closed its books on the incident after receiving an inquiry report from coroner Edmond Jorre de St. Jorre which put the cause of death as suicide.

Injured in the incident were 29-year-old Kenneth Paul Wilke who lived with Gundrum at 1521 Cedar Glen, and 31-year-old Robin Lee Clarke who lived at 4031 Hollydene where the shootings took place.

Clarke, a former girlfriend of Gundrum's, and Wilke were in the bedroom of her home when Gundrum burst in and began shooting a rifle.

Wilke was wounded in the arm and received cuts when he escaped through a bedroom window.

The woman received a bullet wound in the back and a broken right arm from a rifle butt swing by Gundrum.

She escaped and drove herself to hospital. Wilke ran to a neighbor's house and called police.

Saanich police and the Greater Victoria Emergency Response team surrounded the house for 3½ hours before bursting in and discovering Gundrum's body in the bathroom.

Stewart said the shootings were the result of "emotional strain . . . brought about by the recent separation from Robin Clarke."

Anglers Douse Blaze

A group of anglers armed with a three-gallon bucket and a minnow pial helped put out a bush fire on a four-acre island in Saanich Inlet Tuesday afternoon.

The fire broke out at about 3 p.m. on the northern end of unoccupied Senasus Island and was spotted by Ron Stanley-Jones and his wife who were fishing near their home at Henderson Point opposite the island.

The couple, taking a bucket and minnow pail rowed ashore, and were joined by other fishermen. Ten Central Saanich volunteer firemen arrived a short time later in a boat provided by Anglers Anchorage Marina, and quickly contained the blaze.

A spokesman for the fire department, who said about an acre was burned, praised the anglers.

"If they hadn't been there the whole island may have gone up," he said.

Mass Murders Claimed 30

VANCOUVER (CP) — More than 30 persons have fallen victim to mass murders in a half-dozen incidents in British Columbia during the past 19 years.

The most recent was Monday, when four teen-agers were gunned down by a rifle-wielding man. A fifth youth fled the scene when the man began firing a .30-06-calibre rifle and escaped, uninjured, to report the carnage.

Most of the known multiple murderers in recent B.C. history have been men, and most have been insane — although their reasons for killing have varied.

Using a borrowed revolver, Vancouver policeman Leonard Hogue stalked and gunned down his wife and children in their Coquitlam home in April, 1965, before turning the weapon on himself. Hogue wiped out his family after learning he was being investigated in connection with two holdups.

Dale Nelson of West Creston, shot, stabbed and mutilated three adults and five children early one Saturday in the fall of 1970 in the West Kootenay community of West Creston. Nelson surrendered to police the following day.

Nelson was found fit to stand trial, but was found not guilty by reason of insanity by a British Columbia Supreme Court jury, and was committed to a mental institution.

Of the various multiple slayings, the one that most resembles Monday's tragedy occurred in a bush area seven miles north of Mission on July 12, 1964.

The bodies of Donald Kehler, 19, Rodney Wiren, 19, and Tony Webster, 18, all of Surrey, were found slaughtered in their sleeping bags beside Steelhead Lake. They had been shot 17 times with a .22-calibre rifle they had been shooting with earlier.

Dalton Grey, then 24, was convicted of Kehler's murder and was sentenced to life in prison.

In June, 1958, David Paul, 53, his wife Helen, and daughter Dorothy were shot and hacked to death with an axe in what was billed as Vancouver's first triple murder. The killer has never been found.

William Lepine, 27, an escaper from Riverview Mental Hospital, went on a rampage in the Kootenays in August, 1972, killing six persons ranging from a 16-year-old boy to a 71-year-old man and wounding three other persons.

Lepine was found unfit to stand trial.

Anne Durrant, 22, of Vancouver and Leif Carlsson of Sweden were found shot to death in their sleeping bags at Radar Beach on the west coast of Vancouver Island in June, 1972. They had been shot 10 times with a .22-calibre rifle.

Police issued wanted posters for Joseph Burgess, alias Job Week, a Bible-quoting former Jesus freak, but the suspect has not been located.

The following persons are requested to contact the nearest detachment of the RCMP for an urgent personal message: Roland Brown of Merritt, Howard Brown of Merritt, William Robert Lane of Didsbury, Alta.; Robert Nesbitt of Kingston, Ont.; Bud Petersen of Ashcroft, Stephen Blair of Crescent City, Calif.; Zena Tanskannen of Prince George, Robert Warrland of Prince George.

Another Pipeline Problem

DEADHORSE, Alaska (AP) — Oil is moving again in the trouble-plagued Alaska pipeline after the third shutdown in 16 days As in the other stoppages, officials blamed "human error."

Repair crews drove a wooden wedge into a 1½-inch vent fitting on a valve Tuesday evening to plug a leak caused when a truck rammed into a section of the 800-mile line. The U.S. interior department said that more than 200 barrels—8,400 gallons—sprayed from the line and clean-up crews were collecting as much of the spilled fuel as possible.

Alyeska Pipeline Service Co. refused to allow reporters to visit the scene 23 miles south of Prudhoe Bay. But from a plane flying over the site, it looked like a black-and-brown fan had spread over about seven acres of tundra. Some oil had reached two nearby lakes, but it was not possible from the air to judge how serious the pollution was.

Oil in the pipeline started moving again at 2:11 a.m. EDT, three hours after the repairs were made. An interior department spokesman said the agency did not require any special approval before flow was resumed.

Less than 24 hours earlier, the interior department had given Alyeska permission to resume pumping oil through the $7.7-billion pipeline following a 10-day shutdown. That had been caused by an explosion which destroyed Pump Station No. 8, and the interior department blamed "human error."

The leak was reported at 5:55 p.m. EDT. The truck, a front loader, was helping to bury the valve, which like others along the line was uncovered for the June start-up to make it more accessible.

Edward Patton, Alyeska chief executive officer, said the truck knocked off a small vent on a valve. An interior department spokesman said the line was shut down immediately, but oil already in the pipe sprayed out until the pressure was relieved.

An Alyeska spokesman said the 48-inch line was not damaged and the damaged valve fitting was replaced five hours after the leak was reported.

Early Tuesday, several hours after the oil flow had resumed, an oil-well pumping station at Prudhoe Bay—one of four that feed the pipeline—was closed because of a leak of 40 to 50 barrels, about 2,100 gallons.

TRIDENT ARRESTS

BANGOR, Wash. (AP)—Two men were arrested Tuesday outside the main gate of the Trident nuclear submarine base under construction near here, said Kitsap County prosecutor Dan Clem.

John Springer of Baltimore and Michael Caprio of New Jersey were later charged with disorderly conduct, specifically "obstructing vehicular traffic," Clem said.

Jim Douglass, a member of the Bangor summer task force demonstrating at the base, said the two men were handing out leaflets inviting Trident base workers to a meeting with the anti-missile group.

Thirty-two other persons — a number of them Canadians — have been arrested for trespassing and traffic obstruction since an anti-nuclear demonstration at the base

City French Immersion Program Depends on Gov't Funding Size

The amount of government money available likely will decide whether Greater Victoria school board accepts an education ministry "invitation" to establish a French immersion program in high schools.

Vic Thomson, assistant superintendent of schools in charge of curriculum, said today he doesn't know too much about the proposal but he doubts the board will consider it until concrete information on funding is supplied.

Education Minister Pat McGeer said Tuesday he hoped that by as early as 1978, larger school disitricts in B.C. would have established immersion programs for students wishing to become bilingual.

"The realities of Canadian life indicate that innreased opportunities for British Columbia students to become bilingual must be made available."

He did not indicate what type of funding would be made available.

With federal government assistance, Greater Victoria has emphasized immersion at the elementary level.

An immersion program for kindergarten students began five years ago, and has now expanded to Grade 4 with an immediate goal to expand to Grade 7.

Last winter, language commissioner Keith Spicer said Victoria has the best participation of all Canadian cities on a per capita basis in implementing French immersion.

McGeer noted the study of French seems to be increasing in B.C. with 20.1 per cent of elementary students voluntarily learning the language last school year, comapred with 5.7 per cent in 1970-71.

This summer at the Lester Pearson College of the Pacific, there are 55 elementary teachers taking a four-week course to improve their French teaching skills.

And a survey of 16 language schools and universities across the country as well as federal government statistics show record numbers of Canadians are trying to become bilingual.

The survey found record numbers of francophones in Quebec are studying English, and English-speaking Canadians in every province are studying French with similar enthtusiasm.

Floyd Tuzo, co-ordinator of English second-language programs at Concordia University in Montreal, said the number of francophones enrolled in English courses has more than tripled in the last two years.

"The majority of these students are young people who voted for the Parti Quebecois and they're not in the least defensive about learning English for employment purposes," Tuzo said.

Figures from the secretary of state's office show 7,000 full-time students received $800 bursaries to take intensive six-week English and French-language courses this summer in 37 institutions. The budget for the program has been increased 50 per cent.

"The so-called backlash is over-rated," Mary Gray, the bursary co-ordinator, says. "We've found a really genuine interest in learing French and no evidence of a decline of interest among francophones studying English."

TOMMY TAKES OFF ON HOUSE SAFARI

OTTAWA (CP) — Tommy Douglas, the usually staid former leader of the NDP, touched off wild appluase in the Commons Tuesday by turning up in a short-sleeved bush jacket.

Douglas was merely trying to beat Ottawa's 33-degree heat, but when he rose to ask a question the Liberals noticed he was dressed much like Prime Minister Trudeau.

Trudeau was wearing an olive green leisure suit that looked like it came straight from the African veldt.

When the Liberals spotted Douglas's garb they cheered, heckled and thumped their desks for at least 30 seconds.

Douglas, however, remained cooler than his tormentors and got the best of an exchange with Mr. Trudeau.

"Step forward so we can see your shorts," said Trudeau, although Douglas was wearing long trousers.

Douglas then told the PM that "jealousy will get him nowhere."

ICBC Claim Filed

appear to have been commenced in mid-November, with the vehicle being subsequently sold on the 11th day of March, 1976," the Vettese letter says.

"The corporation has had no opportunity to inspect the damages sustained to this unit when it was stolen from your lot and as the vehicle is no longer in your possession, the problem is further complicated," Vettese says in the letter.

Cocke demanded in the legislature Tuesday whether it is ICBC policy to pay out claims on a car that was never seen by adjusters or anyone else in the corporation.

Earlier documents had shown that the Mustang was recovered damaged, about four days after it was stolen in June, 1975.

ICBC paid out a damage claim of $1,850 for the car, which, another ICBC document revealed, was about $400 more than the actual value of the car.

McGeer took the questions in the legislature as notice, which means he may answer them later.

Outside the house, former Attorney-general Alex Macdonald (NDP—Vancouver East) said that "you can't damage your car, and then just before you put in a claim — eight months later — pay the premium in preparation for that claim."

Macdonald also rejected an accusation by McGeer that ICBC documents tabled in the house had been stolen.

"The documents were not stolen, but they were received by members of the opposition," he said.

Macdonald said it is the "privilege and the duty" of the members to use any documents "when they come to light" to prevent cover-ups by the government.

Eighteen Blacks Burned to Death

SALISBURY (Reuter) — Eighteen blacks, including women and children, were burned to death when guerrillas set fire to a hut in Rhodesia's northeastern area today, the South African Press Association reported.

The news agency quoted reports reaching Salisbury as saying most of the dead were women and children. It said no further details were immediately available.

Prime Minister Ian Smith, meanwhile, appeared unshaken today by vehement opposition from black nationalists to his plan for an election leading to a multi-racial government for Rhodesia.

Government sources said the white-minority leader is convinced that his plan can succeed, although he has not entirely closed the door on an Anglo-American proposal for a peaceful transition to majority rule by next year.

Black nationalist leaders Bishop Abel Muzorewa and Rev. Ndabaningi Sithole scored Smith's appeal for an election mandate to seek a settlement with Rhodesia-based nationalists.

WAR PLAN—ARAFAT

BEIRUT (AP) — Yasser Arafat's Palestine Liberation Organization declared today that Israeli Prime Minister Menahem Begin's latest peace proposals will set the stage for a fifth Arab-Israeli war.

"This is a war plan, not a peace plan," said PLO spokesman Mahmoud Labadi. "The PLS rejects the Begin plan from A to Z, because it negates the right of the Palestinian people to self-determination and nationhood."

the weather

The summery trend in the weather which started in southern B.C. Tuesday will spread northwards today as a narrow ridge of high pressure continues to build across the province. This ridge is an appendage of a high cell of high pressure centred in the mid-Pacific. The dry stable air under the ridge will result in generally sunny weather today with temperatures climbing back to near normal after our record-breaking cold spell. The upper level circulation will remain virtually unchanged through the remainder of this week and with July rapidly coming to a close we don't seem to be any closer to the establishment of a real summertime situation.

Eye Specialist Uses Computers Prescribing Lenses

Right Out of Space And Lightning Fast

By AB KENT
Times Staff

A Victoria opthalmologist is using computers to prescribe corrective lenses in little more than the blink of an eye.

Three machines employing optics, light, laser beam and cumputer logic together are shaving at least an hour off the time it normally takes to test subjective refraction, field of vision and lenses.

The device is a $25,000 Auto-Refractor, a machine that evolved from the U.S. space program.

Apart from the one here, about five others have been put into use in other parts of the province, including Duncan, Nanaimo, Vancouver, New Westminster and Kelowna.

The origin of the Auto-Refractor, made in Virginia by Acuity Systems Inc., was a stabilizing device developed for the U.S. National Aeronautics and Space Administration to correct tumbling of satellites in space orbit.

Scientists rigged a telescope in a satellite and trained it on Vega, one of the brightest stars in the sky, so that its image would be reflected on a battery of light-sensitive cells linked to a computer circuit.

The slightest shift in position relative to Vega was then reported through the computer which in turn instructed the satellite's guidance jets to take corrective action.

The system cost $6 million to develop and proved so successful at calculating deviation that other practical applications were developed, including a speedy, accurate means of measuring refraction in the human eye.

In its opthalmic application the system uses an infra red light beam — invisible to the patient being tested — which reflects from the retina, the layer of light-sensitive tissue at the back of the eye.

This light oscillates and rotates at a rate of 700 cycles per second to give the computer several readings averaged into a single digital readout or evaluation of each eye. The beam is focussed through a small telescope, just as in the satellite.

Conventionally, this type of sight testing requires 20-30 minutes. The Auto-Refractor does it in five.

Essentially the machine tests the lens power of each eyeball, but it does not discover organic faults as such. If there is something the matter with a lens it will not produce the right numbers at the back of the machine.

"The machine never gets tired or frustrated," one doctor said. "It goes on producing evidence, even when it's nonsense, so then we can tell there's something else wrong with the eye — like cataracts."

Acuity Systems, who now ask closer to $28,000 for the device, consider it so delicate an instrument that they shipped the first one here in company with a technician who made the installation and remained until he was satisfied the machine worked properly. Subsequent servicing has been by a Seattle-based tecnician.

Acuity Systems is particular about whether a practice warrants such a machine. A one-man office, lacking volume, would not qualify because the unit requires fairly steady use to be efficient.

The second machine, if anything is more automated than the first. The Auto-Lensmeter does virtually the same thing as its big brother for just under a quarter of the cost, but it diagnoses spectacle lenses, not the human eye.

A laser beam oscillates and rotates through the lens of a pair of glasses to give a refractory reading within lenses, not the human eye.

A laser beam oscillates and rotates through the lens of a pair of glasses to give a refractory reading within two seconds. Lens power appears as a digital display on a small screen, saving the doctor, or technician a lot of manipulating with optical equipment, with less chance of error.

The third instrument in the stable of computerized electronics is the $6,000 Auto-Field, made by Gulton Biotronics, of California.

This unit, like a prop from 2001: A Space Odyssey, replaces an hour's work with a flashlight, opthalmologists say. It takes about three minutes to test field of vision and will indicate such trouble as glaucoma.

In operation, a patient focusses one eye at a time on a small red cross appearing through a lens in the centre of a vertical, bowl-shaped screen about two feet in diameter.

In what appears as a random arrangement is a series of pinholes in the bowl, through which tiny lights appear in sequence. Each time a light goes on and is reflected from the patient's retina, a switch closes circuit to make a mark on a paper chart representing the areas of sensitivity for that eye.

If there is a blind patch or restricted peripheral vision, the machine-made chart will show it by a blank spot.

"You get an appreciation of a patient's general vision," say doctors. "He may have 20-20 vision, but it may be tunnel vision.

"And the beauty of it is, if the patient tires and closes his eyes, the machine goes to sleep. The moment he opens his eyes it goes on again."

You Win—But You Lose

A deputy in the attorney-general's department said today he agrees six law students working for the summer as deputy sheriffs should be paid the going rate — but the money isn't available.

So the six are being laid off at the end of the month rather than working to September after their union launched a grievance seeking equal pay for equal work.

Dennis Sheppard, associate deputy attorney-general, said the early layoffs didn't come because a union launched a grievance. He considers it a fair claim but there is simply not enough money to meet it.

Sheppard also said the wrong letter was sent to the six advising them they would be laid off. The letter said they were being cut because of a decrease in operational requirements.

"That isn't quite right," he said.

Whoever drafted the letter for him to sign probably had in mind that only provincial courts sit during the summer. But the main reason for the layoffs is there is no money to pay the students full deputy sheriff's salaries, even though they are doing the work.

The students are Angela Bartram and Phil Mahr from the University of Victoria's law school and Donald Skogstad, Rob Bales, Phil Pelzman and Nadine Marzocco from the law school at UBC.

When hired in May they were told they would be paid $970 a month. Regular deputy sheriffs get $1,172 and a grievance arguing equal pay for equal work was filed July 7 by the B.C. Government Employees Union.

Within a few days five of the students got letters from Sheppard which said they were being laid off "due to a decrease in our operational requirements . . ."

The sixth, Marzocco, will work to Aug. 15 to complete a report for Sheppard.

Sheppard said the students were hired with limited grant money from the provincial labor department. As it is, he is faced with finding about $5,400 to pay them retroactively and for this month at the full deputy sheriff's rate and he has no money budgeted for this.

Developers' Race Urged for Centre

By DEREK SIDENIUS
Times Staff

The decision on whether a regional shopping centre is built at Broadmead or Tillicum should be settled by a race between developers to sign up tenants, Saanich aldermen were told Tuesday.

Jim Kelley, president of Columbia Commonwealth Ltd., said at a lands, planning and housing committee meeting he feels so strongly the Tillicum site should get the nod that he'd stake everything on the outcome of the competition.

He suggested council designate both sides for the regional shopping centre. The first developer to lease 350,000 square feet would be declared the winner and awarded the building permit. The loser would be limited to building a smaller community shopping centre.

Kelley said he is confident the Tillicum site would prove more acceptable to investors and the business community.

His challenge, which failed to spark any reaction from committee members, came at the end of an hour-long "hard sell" presentation made by his company for the Tillicum site.

The presentation came a day after The Bay and Broadmead Farms Ltd. had approached council over the regional shopping centre in the Broadmead-Royal Oak area. Mayor Ed Lum said last week only one of the proposed centres will get the go-ahead.

As in the case of Broadmead, ratepayers in the Tillicum area appeared before the committee and presented a petition opposing the development on the grounds insufficient information about the project had been made available to them.

They cited traffic problems, a possible adverse effect on birds and wildlife and the impact on existing stores in the area as factors against the Tillicum project.

Kelley orchestrated a review of the project calling on a bevy of consultants, some of whom he had flown in from Toronto with him, to discuss the major issues.

Economist Herman Kircher said a major shopping centre is warranted in Victoria and that since 1973 market surveys have shown the Tillicum-Burnside location as best.

(A market survey commissioned by Broadmead came to the same conclusion about the Broadmead site).

Kircher said there is "more than adequate market potential" to support a regional shopping centre but agreed it would have a devastating effect on the small existing centres on Burnside and Gorge Road.

"There will be hardships. No question. But the market is more than adequate to justify this type of centre."

He said market predictions indicate persons in Greater Victoria will spend $40 million more in department stores in 1981 than they were in 1976.

If Tillicum went ahead it would generate retail department sales of about $25 million, he said.

Landscape artichect Don Vaughan argued a major shopping centre would enhance the ecology of the 31-acre site because the company intends to build holding tanks to control drainage and spend up to $413,000 improving the Colquitz Creek waterway system as it passes through the property.

The site, home of the Tillicum Drive-In Theatre, is "totally mutilated and bankrupt as it is now," Vaughan said.

Committee members voted only to receive and file the three-quarter-inch brief prepared by the company.

Committee chairman Fred Severson told Kelley the Capital Region Board has recommended that if a regional shopping centre is built in Saanich it should be at Broadmead.

Ald. Ian Cass, answering charges council has held secret meetings with developers about the shopping centre, said that up to now the municipality hasn't received a formal application for either development.

"If that's the case," Kelley retorted, "I hope you will consider this presentation a formal application."

He was told he'd have to complete a proper application form.

"That will be done," he said, ". . . forthwith."

They're Sidney's Disciples Of Billy Graham of Dentistry

Dental disease is so common that, alas, we have all come to accept it along with a touch of senility and those greying hairs at the temples.

Everyone has cavities. And one day, even if in the distant future, we'll all lose our teeth and have to wear false ones. Right?

Wrong!

People should stop looking upon their dentist as a repairman to whom they go only when they have a problem to fix; and they should realize that if they look after their own teeth more, there's no reason why they should ever lose them. So says Dr. Dino Paulos.

Dr. Paulos?

Well, you see, I was intrigued by this advertisement in the Times recently: Dr. Dino Paulos wishes to announce the opening of his preventive dental practice in Sidney. So I thought I'd pop out and have a chat with Dr. Dino and see what it was all about.

Dino Paulos is another of your relatively new Canadians. He was born in Greece and came here as a teen-ager. Now 31, he is in his fourth year in dentistry after graduating from the University of Manitoba in Winnipeg along with his partner here,

Dr. Murray Kosick. But I won't waste any more of your time with incidentals.

What is important is that Paulos and Kosick are part of a new breed of dentist pushing the message that prevention is the best means of cure.

"It's a new philosophy popular with young graduates today, as well as with many older dentists, of keeping a tooth rather than extracting it," explains Dr. Paulos.

"We're disciples really of American William Barclay, the Billy Graham of dentistry. He's completely dogmatic, has a very strict program and claims he hasn't pulled a tooth since 1961!"

Paulos and Kosick are just as serious about the mouths they look into.

"Pulling a tooth is something we don't like to do here, either," Paulos says, "not unless it's completely beyond repair and there's no other alternative."

Oh, Paulos and Kosick cover all aspects of dentistry, all right. If people go there with very bad tooth decay, they'll do extractions. If people go there with very bad tooth decay, they'll do extractions. If people go there with no teeth, they'll fit false jobs. It's just that the emphasis is on prevention.

"When new patients come in, we spend about an hour or an hour and a-half with them, taking a panoramic film, tracing the particular disease and explaining the process of it with the help of a book we have," says Dr. Paulos. "And we show them how to brush properly and how to use dental floss, the secret of defeating tooth decay."

"It's a style, okay; it's not a speciality, it's a style," explains Paulos. "Preventive dentistry in its all encompassing sense is the prevention and control of oral disease. We know that 85 per cent of all the teeth lost today are due to periodontal disease (gum disease) and dental caries (cavities) which themselves are caused by dental plaque, a film that unfortunately is the same color as your teeth and consists of bacteria and carbohydrates.

"Since we do know the cause, then it's just a matter of controlling it. If in some way we can educate the public to become participants in their oral health by removing this cause, then there's no reason why they can't hold on to their teeth for life."

This education includes the proper use of brushing and flossing, a good diet without too many in-between-meal snacks and candies which are a killer, and fluoridation of city water supplies, which in itself, says Dr. Paulos, cuts your dental bills by 50 per cent.

It all sounds so basic and simple that you wonder what the stumbling block can be. But there is one: the people themselves.

"People have many misconceptions about their teeth," explains the dentist. "Because dental disease is so common and affects everyone, people become nonchalant about it. And it becomes hard to convince them that it isn't necessary to lose their teeth."

. . . new breed

So many have already lost the battle without putting up much of a fight. There are, says Dr. Paulos, 35 million people in the United States without teeth.

It's sad, he says, because it's so much to lose.

"There's nothing that we have that can replace our own teeth. And they are so much better. Your looks, your smile, the function, eating . . . it's worth fighting for to keep."

Dino Paulos flashes that mouthful of white in an ear-to-ear grin.

"I'm sure your natural dentition is better than clickers!"

Pollution of the Mind Peddled for TV Profit

By PAUL ST. PIERRE
The Sun

Pollution of the mind is different from pollution of our air, water and food, or so we visionary, socialist utopians are being told by the television industry.

Unless a diligent search of the past month's files failed us, this was the weight and burthen of the industry's response to the LaMarsh royal commission on television violence.

A commercial TV spokesman found that the Ontario royal commission's report "smacked of overriding government involvement." A cable TV industry spokesman used the words "visionary, socialist utopia."

That's the trouble when fat accumulates around the brain — you can only shout or squeal if criticized.

Since these scattered, intemperate outbursts, there has been silence about how TV teaches our children violence for profit. Well, not complete silence. Some people will keep talking.

A week ago the national convention of the United Church of Christ in the U.S. accused the U.S. television industry of the following:

Debasing U.S. culture. Degrading people. Exploiting sex and violence. Falsifying human relations.

A more damning indictment of any industry is hard to bring to mind but it's a small church, only 1.8 million adherents, and the violence broadcasters may convince themseles that this, like the strictures of the American Medical Association and a few dozen other public bodies, can be dismissed as the sort of thing you have to put up with from amateur critics.

The link between public violence and TV violence becomes more clearly identified with each passing month. Psychiatrists, educators and commissions of inquiry cry out alarms. Even the advertisers, not people who normally pass up an easy buck, become fearful of association with the viler kneecap-breaker shows. The industry just rambles on, accasionally uttering a few pious promises of reform.

We socialist, visionary utopians were a long time understanding Minimata disease also. That doesn't mean we never get the message. We're just a little slow, that's all.

To help us in our slow learning process, let's review a few of the findings of the Ontario royal commission, the result of two years of studies. (Emphasis by Bold type, throughout, is ours.)

Is there a cause-and-effect relationship between increasing crime and TV violence? Yes, said the commission quite simply. They couldn't weigh this effect. Mind pollution is less quantifiable than mercury poisoning. But it is there, they say.

"Many people are becoming more indifferent to violence being perpetrated against others, as well as becoming more fearful for their own safety both at home and in the streets."

What of the highly profitable TV networks which pump this hazardous substance into our living rooms?

"Entertainment television spokesmen offered no defence on moral or ethical grounds, obviously there being none to offer, but argued that competitively — to continue to make profits—they had no choice. They seemed to place profit above responsibility."

The commissioners return to this theme again in their report.

"The constantly increasing flow of television violence on the U.S. networks and the Canadian private networks and private stations (the publicly-owned Canadian Broadcasting Corp. has a better record) goes on at all hours, including times when children are watching. There is no doubt whatever, from the evidence of all sources, that this escalation is based on constant pressure to maximize profits and is done without regard for the effects upon audiences. To put it explicitly, it is the result of placing profits above social responsibility."

And, notes the commission, "any other industry that is proved to be, or even suspected of putting profits above the public good is challenged by governments or the public and brought to account."

The question left in the wake of this and other damning indictments is not whether the TV industry will be brought to account. The only question is when.

Judging by out experience in the better known areas of air, water and food pollution, it may be several years.

Most of us can remember that industries dismissed the first warnings about chemical pollutants and carcinogenic foods as the vaporings of cranks. Later, when evidence accumulated that something was indeed wrong, we were told it was not very wrong. And, next in the progression, we were told the clean-up measures were prohibitively expensive.

The public accepted industry's indifference and chidings for a few years but the public, praise be, will not accept harmful products forever. Not even in the high name of returning profits to shareholders.

And so it will be with the television industry, an industry desperately ill with an old ailment — fatty degeneration of the soul.

'These are Not Easy Times in the Kremlin'

By HEDRICK SMITH
New York Times

Soviet leader Leonid Brezhnev has a reputation as a fanatic soccer and hockey fan, but last week he showed up at the Kremlin Hall of Congresses for an evening of ballet. He took the applause of the audience from his spot in the main box ostentatiously flanked by Yuri Andropov, the head of the secret police, and Dmitri Ustinov, the Defence Minister.

It was the kind of appearance that attracts attention among Kremlin-watchers who have come to feel that such occasions have symbolic importance beyond the evening's excitement. It seemed that Brezhnev was trying to make a point or two, to demonstrate that in spite of reports of his failing health he is capable of sitting through a ballet, and to show publicly that the armed forces and the security police, two principal power centres along with the Communist Party, are solidly with him. The touch of symbolism was especially timely for Brezhnev for these are not easy times in the Kremlin.

The centrifugal forces in the world Communist movement are tugging ever harder away from the centre. At home, projections for his pet, 15-year economic plan, running to 1990, show labor and capital shortages ahead and a tightening squeeze on energy supplies. Relations with countries as diverse as China and Egypt stubbornly refuse to improve and even his recent visit to France was not a notable success. Most crucially, the aging Soviet leader, who has seen four occupants in the White HOuse since he came to power in 1964, has yet to discover how to deal effectively with President Carter.

Hardliners Upset

There are signs that, internally, Brezhnev feels on the defensive. Privately, well-placed Muscovites tell foreign visitors that provincial party leaders grumble that the Soviet leader has not delivered as much development money as he promised them; that ideological hardliners are upset that he is not tougher with Carter on issues like human rights; that military and security circles are peeved because he let Andrei Gromyko, the Foreign Minister, carry on arms control talks with the United States so quickly after President Carter put forward what Moscow regarded as a scandalously one-sided arms proposal in March.

Externally, the Soviet dispute with Santiago Carrillo, the Spanish Communist leader, has become more than an exercise in polemics. From Moscow's perspective, the ideological and political independence of Carrillo's brand of Eurocommunism contains a dangerous germ that could infect not only Eastern Europe but elements of Soviet society as well. Ever since Lenin, the Kremlin has been fanatically suspicious of "splitters" who refuse to kneel before Soviet authority and accept Moscow's lead.

To the Kremlin, Carrillo's assertion that Russia is not truly a Communist or even a Socialist state is unpardonable heresy. But in reality, the little Spanish party is probably less of a concern than the large, powerful Italian Communist party with its decentralized power, local factory committees and willingness to live with democratic processes.

Similarly, the Kremlin feels threatened by the relentless American pressure on human rights. This is not so much because the K.G.B. secret police cannot control and curtail the small band of active dissidents. It is rather because Brezhnev and other party elders sense the broader ideological non-conformism among the passive dissenters in Soviet society. The generation of intellectuals whose faith in the system was shattered in their student days when Nikita Khrushchev exposed Stalin 20 years ago, is now middle-aged and cynical.

BREZHNEV

It was not only to assert its sovereignty and to protest against "outside interference" in its internal affairs but also to shield these silent non-conformists, that the Kremlin barred Malcolm Toon, the United States Ambassador, from delivering a July 4th address on Soviet television. Toon's remarks included one taut sentence that asserted: "Americans will continue to state publicly their belief in human rights and their hope that violations of these rights wherever they occur will end." But the Soviet regime's troubles with the new American president run far broader than mere pique at what the Kremlin has come to regard as Carter's unreasonable and therefore dangerous campaign on human rights.

Symptomatic of the distrust generated over the last six months was the Soviet reaction to Carter's recent decision to halt production of the B-1 bomber. Rather than see some favorable sign in this gesture, the Kremlin had its commentators complain instead that Carter's decision to go ahead with development of the Cruise missile "seriously complicates efforts for the limitation of the strategic arms race."

From the outset, Carter has thrown Brezhnev off balance. It is as if they were temperamentally ill suited for each other — the younger American leader anxious to make his mark with bold new proposals, the aging Soviet leader uneasy at change and innovation, and anxious to preserve Soviet-American relations as he had come to know them under the Nixon and Ford administrations.

Uneasiness

The general uneasiness in Moscow about Carter and where he is headed contributes to Brezhnev's defensiveness. At lower levels, Soviet officials confide to Western counterparts that those who played moderate roles in the development of cultural, economic and political accords with the United States during the heyday of detente four or five years ago are now being castigated by hardliners for allegedly having exceeded their authority. To defend themselves, some of the former moderates are now reverting to old-fashioned polemics against Washington. And Brezhnev himself takes trouble to carefully select his partners for attending the ballet.

Another Threat to Ozone

By DANIEL BEHRMAN

The stratosphere's ozone layer, which screens the earth from harmful ultra-violet radiation, could be reduced by more than 10 per cent within a century if the use of chemical fertilizer continues to increase, according to a Harvard University scientist.

Dr. Michael B. McElroy, of the Harvard Centre for Earth and Planetary Physics, gave this warning at the Second Symposium on the Origin and Distribution of the Elements held at UNESCO House in Paris last May. The symposium was organized by the International Association of Geochemistry and by UNESCO.

According to Dr. McElroy nitrogen in chemical fertilizers eventually ends up acting to reduce the ozone layer.

In an interview, McElroy compared his figure of 10 per cent to the predicted loss of one per cent of the ozone layer if a fleet of 1,000 Concordes were to be operated. The figure is also over double the 5 per cent loss feared as the result of the use of fluorocarbon gas in aerosol sprays, a prospect that has led the United States government to propose a complete ban on this gas by mid-1979.

"We can solve the supersonic transport problem by not flying and we can solve the fluorocarbon problem by not spraying, but we can't solve the fertilizer problem by not eating," McElroy remarked. "In fact, this is not a fertilizer but a food problem.

"It would be premature to take action now, but this is a potentially serious problem," he added. "If I were to come up with a crash program to solve it, I would say that we would have to find ways to re-use nitrogen, to waste less food and to avoid or minimize the use of animals as intermediaries in food production."

The difficulty is one of economics as well: it is much easier to use clean chemical fertilizer than to haul huge loads of manure around a country.

The chain of events linked to this threat against the ozone layer begins when fertilizer is spread in the fields. Most of it is taken up by crops, but 30 per cent runs off into rivers and ground water. Then, McElroy believes, it is transformed into nitrous oxides in certain well-defined areas, principally swamps, lakes and estuaries. A similar change occurs when the nitrogen incorporated into food finds its way into cesspools or sewage treatment plants. When it reaches the stratosphere, nitrous oxide acts as a catalyzing agent to reduce the ozone layer.

He does not believe, on the basis of measurements he has made, that the ocean is acting as a sink, taking up nitrous oxide. If this were the case, there would be no danger on any time scale of concern to present-day mankind. On the contrary, the main source of nitrous oxide seems to be on dry land.

World fertilizer use now stands at some 50 million tons of nitrogen per year. It is estimated that this figure will rise to nearly 200 million tons by the year 2000. While the amount of land used for agriculture has remained relatively constant over the past 15 years, food production has gone up by 15 per cent thanks mainly to the increased use of fertilizer. The trend is likely to continue.

McElroy states that he is not in any sense making an appeal for regulation of fertilizer but rather for more study of the problem and for agricultural practices that might cut back on the need for fertilizer with a minimum impact on food yields.

A Matter of Self-Perception

By SCOTT YOUNG
The Globe and Mail

I get a lot of letters from people who seem to think that I drink a lot, or at any rate harm humanity by mentioning beer or booze without an accompanying sermon. Mrs. Marion Farr of Thornhill brings it up again, (pardon me) with regard to rowdyism in provincial parks. I said there was no obvious solution.

"There is one thing you and your fellow sportsmen and journalists of whatever medium could do, and that is to stop eulogizing the use of alcohol," she wrote, employing a familiar argument. "With the encouragement and promotion that is given by almost everyone to its consumption, the kind of behavior which took place in the campaign is inevitable." There's more, to the point that I've treated teetotalers as little old ladies or simpletons (which I don't think is the case; many people I admire are non-drinkers, some being reformed alcoholics).

Anyway, this is the world we live in. Alcohol is not going to go away. Neither are other drugs, such as marijuana, or even tobacco. Obviously, it is possible to handle all of them if one takes care. I would support banning of liquor and beer advertising of the so-called "lifestyle" line because that is dangerously one-sided. But I don't think anything would be served by acting as if alcohol did not exist. Even to consider such a course as a solution — well, we've all heard of ostriches who stick their heads in the sand, believing that if you can't see something, it doesn't exist.

There is a lot of support for the contrary idea: that people, in developing their own habits, do so from their own needs and capabilities, rather than in emulation of others. Very few politicians try to drink as Churchill did. A ballplayer who equated Babe Ruth's home run hitting with his notoriously wild off-the-field behavior would be a nut. A writer who thinks he can make it sing by drinking like Malcolm Lowry or Brendan Behan will soon find that all he has is a lot of headaches, and not many usable words on paper.

What I'm mainly concerned with is moderation. A case of beer in a car full of teenagers, flinging the empties out on the roadsides, is a bad way to go. A couple of guys at a ballpark with a bottle of Crown Royal they're pouring into Cokes (this happened last week) get dizzier and dizzier, and wouldn't want to have replayed the next day the silly judgments they made while loaded. I think the sight of a drunk, especially a drunken parent, far from promoting the use of alcohol, inhibits it.

It is all a matter of self-perception. A young person projecting that sight of the effects of alcohol into his or her own concept of self is likely to say no to an offer of a drink some other time, if the young person has a normal concern for his or her own image. I know people who got drunk once, by carelessness, and were so affronted by it that they take care forevermore.

Of course, maybe I'm a hard case, rationalizing my own style of living in the way most people do, whatever their habits — whether it's drinking a lot, drinking a little, or teatotaling.
